Japanese Enter Key City After All-Night Fight

TAMSHUI CAPTURED RECAPTURED AFTER ALL-NIGHT FIGHTING

Government Remaining In Canton

Canton, Oct. 15.
Mr. Kai Anang, secretary-general of the Kwangtung Provincial Government, in an interview to-day, denied the report circulated abroad that the Kwangtung Provincial Government and other administrative organs in Canton were removing to Yungyun in northern Kwangtung.
He stated that the Governor, members of the Provincial Government, the Mayor of Canton and all military leaders and their subordinates are remaining in Canton and will continue to carry on their work as usual.
There is no truth in the report that the Government is leaving the city as a result of the Japanese landing at Blas Bay, Mr. Kai concluded.—Cental News.

NO CHINKS IN BRITAIN'S ARMOUR

New War Office Plan
To Remove Defects

LONDON, Oct. 14.
BROADCASTING TO-NIGHT on the anti-aircraft defence developments, Mr. Leslie Hore-Belisha, Minister for War, declared that there must be no chinks in the armour.

He added: "We have surveyed the country and determined the vital points, and employers whose establishments form such vital points will receive a letter asking them to arrange for a number of their employees to man light guns equipped there for their own protection against low-flying attack."

"This is a new scheme to give added protection to specially selected localities. The War Office will progressively furnish guns and instructors, and arms will furnish the personnel. Employees who under-

America's Biggest Spy Trial Opens in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.
AMERICA'S long-awaited spy trial opened to-day when one of the accused, Guenther Rummich, a deserter from the United States army, pleaded guilty.

Four persons are accused, those in addition to Rummich being Johannes Hoffmann, employed on the liner Europe, Erich Glaser, a private in the United States Army Corps, and Otto Herman Voss, employed until his arrest as a technician in the Seversky aircraft factory.
All are accused of transmitting to Germany the secret army code book for communication between aeroplanes and their bases, and various blue prints relating to the design and armament of Seversky pursuit planes on order for the United States army.
The case is described as the biggest spy trial in America since the Great War.

Counsel announced that Rummich will testify for the Government.
Fourteen other persons are named by the Federal Grand Jury in indictments handed up in June, but they are not in custody and cannot be tried. They include Mrs. Jessie Jordan of Dundee, who is serving a four-year sentence for espionage work in Britain, Dr. Ignatz Griebel and Werner Gudenberg, both of whom escaped to Germany before Federal officers could arrest them, and Captain Pfeiffer of Berlin, who has been described as head of the whole German Secret Service.—Reuter.

IT IS UNOFFICIALLY REPORTED from Japanese Sources that Waichow was evacuated by the Chinese forces at 8.15 o'clock this morning.
Japanese troops commenced entering the city from the Nimshan highway at nine o'clock, the report states.

An official communique states that Maoan, four miles south-east of Waichow, was occupied by the Japanese before dawn this morning, but the combined Japanese armies, which converged simultaneously on the Nimshan highway town from the south-west and from the south.

The West River bridge which spans the river a quarter of a mile north of Waichow has been blown up by the Chinese.

It is not clear, however, whether the Chinese have taken up new positions on the north bank of the river or have retreated westwards towards Lake Tungwo.

Dozens of bridges along the Waichow-Cheungmuktau highway, which links Canton with Hongkong and also provides the vital communication link upon which the Japanese are about certain to march in their efforts to straddle the Canton-Kowloon Railway, have been blown up by the Chinese in an effort to retard the Japanese advance.

Waichow is about 20 miles by highway from Cheungmuktau, vital railway centre.

TAMSHUI CHANGES HANDS

According to official Chinese reports, received through United Press, Tamshui changed hands twice last night.

The Japanese captured the city in a moonlight attack, supported by naval gunfire and aerial bombings, shortly before dawn yesterday morning, and wheeling sharply northwards, proceeding up the East River Valley towards Waichow.

Only a small Japanese garrison was left at Tamshui to protect the invaders' rear and Chinese troops in the mountains towards Hongkong suddenly descended upon the city early this morning.

RETREAT FROM COAST

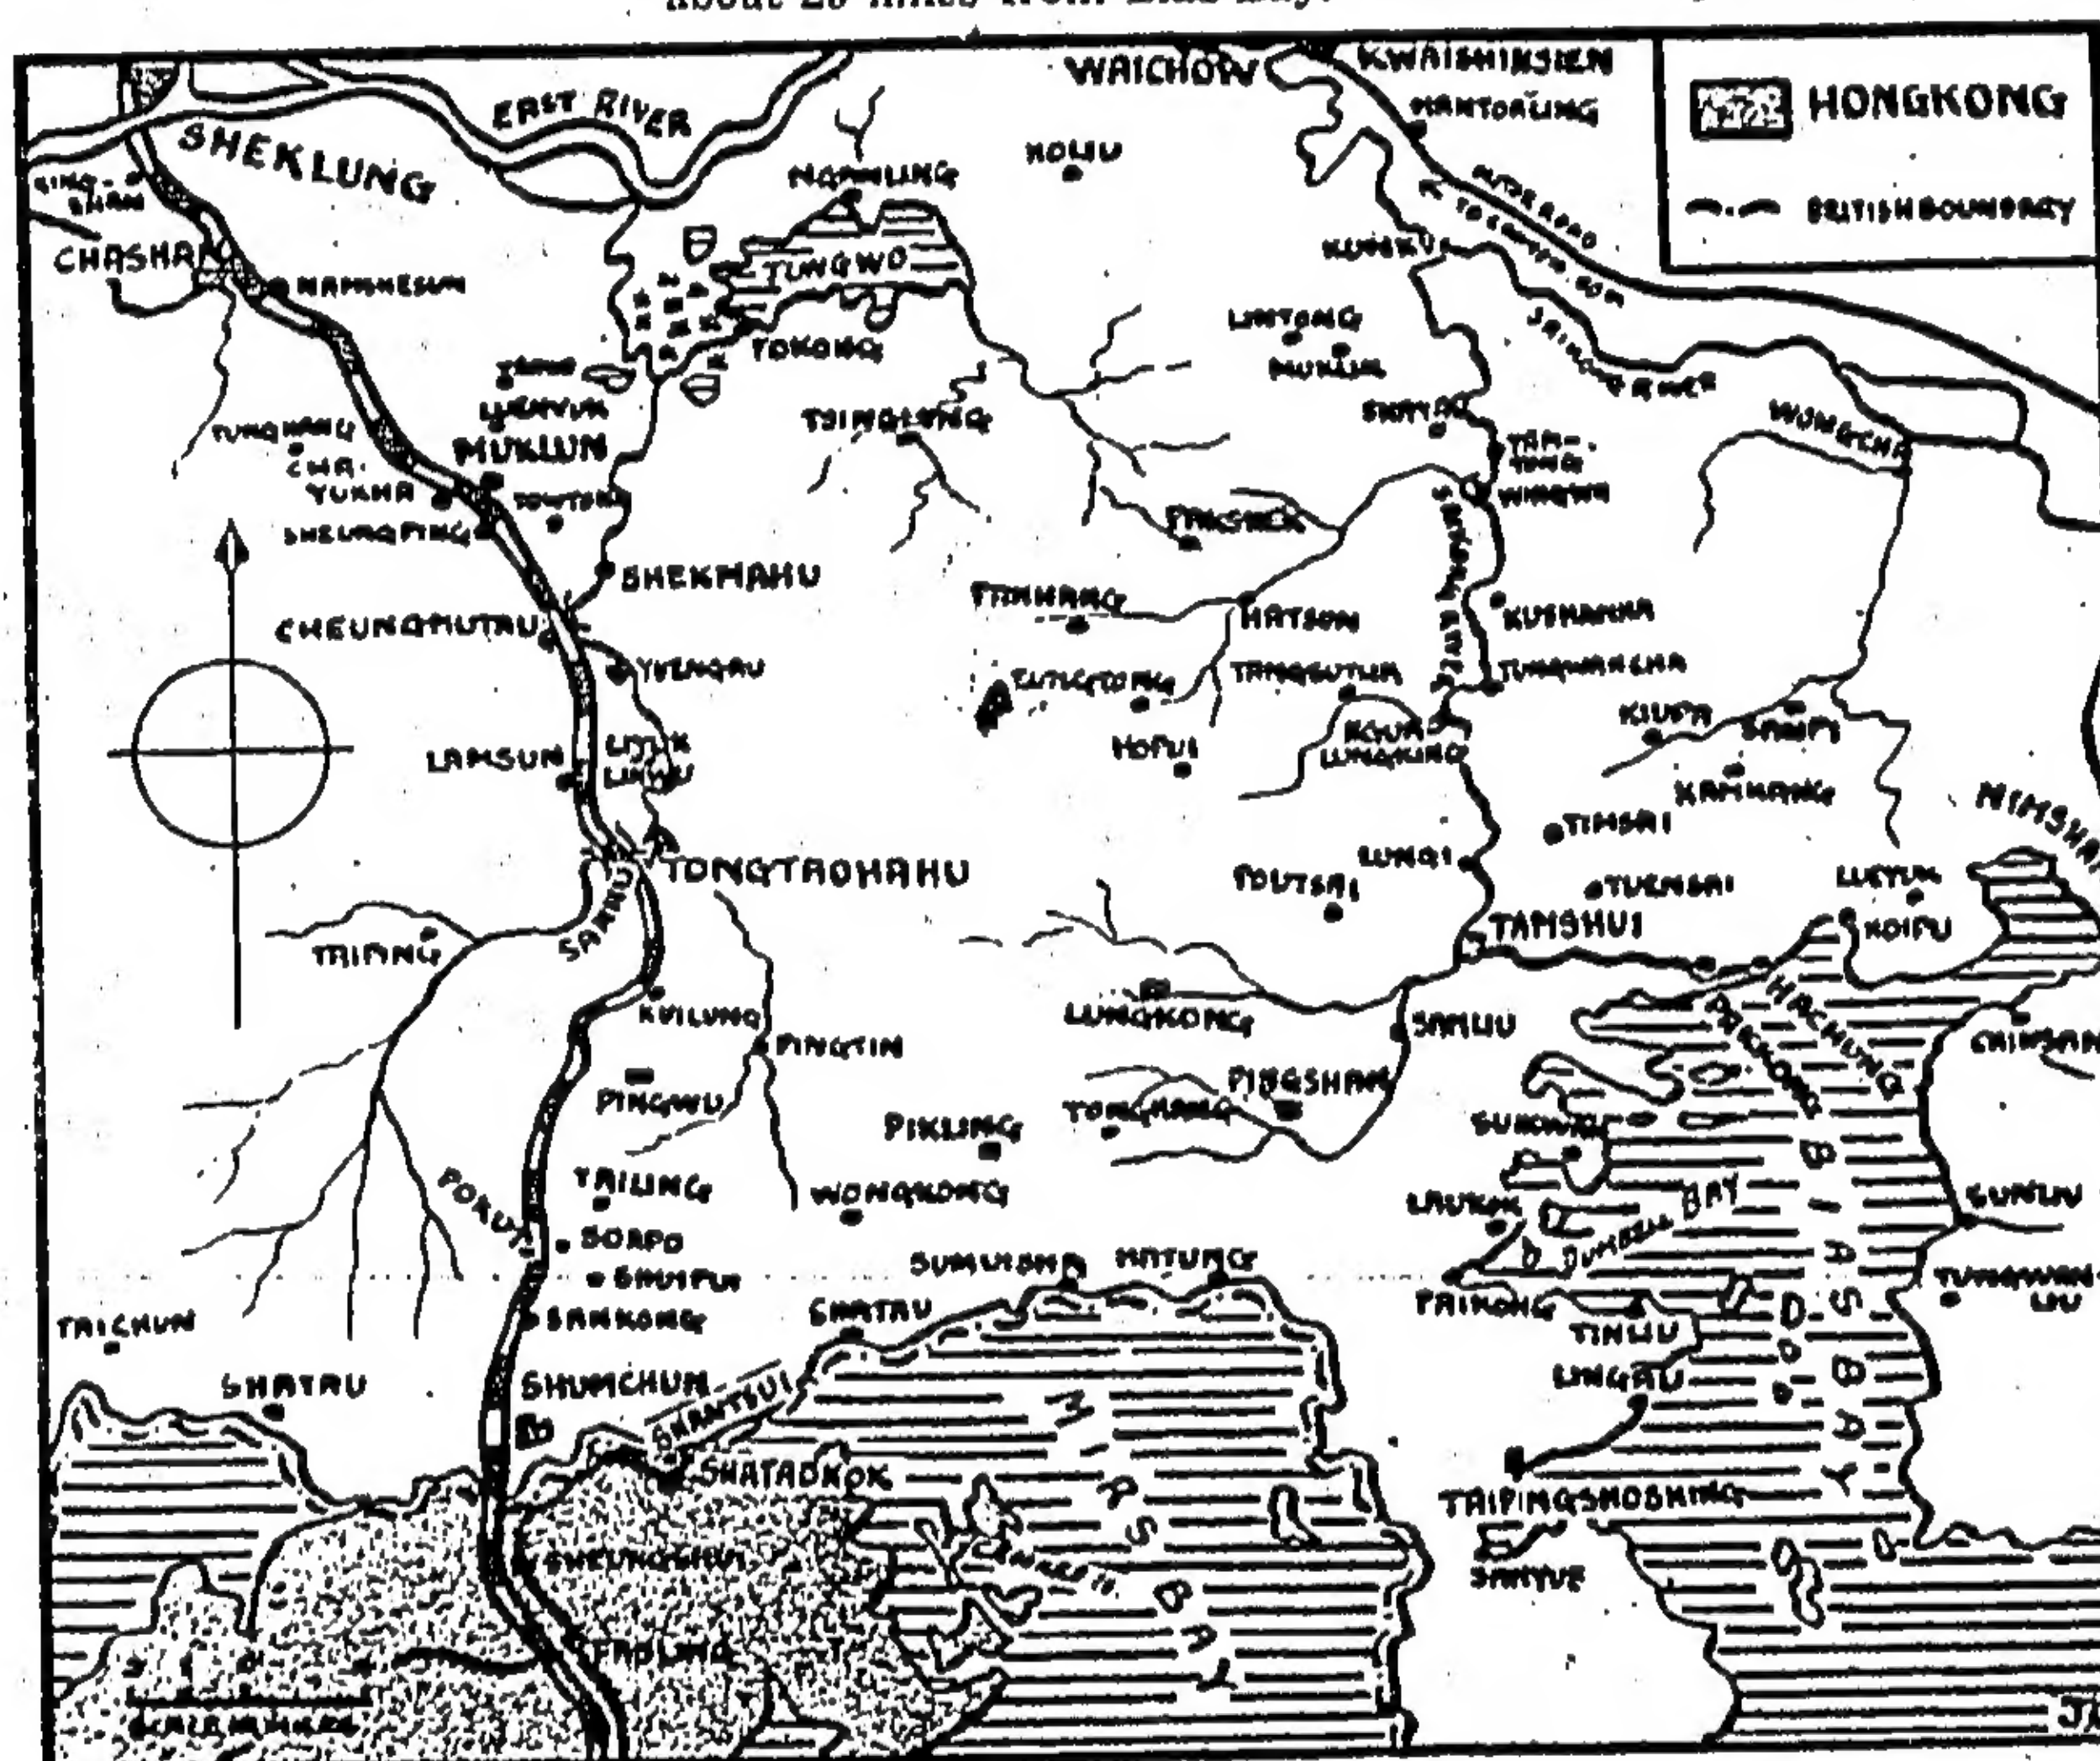

The Chinese communique admits that coast Tamshui did not remain long in Chinese hands adding: "We have voluntarily given up all points within ten miles of the coast in order to avoid naval bombardment."

In Canton, states United Press, the Government has commandeered all shipping and other transportation for the purpose of evacuating refugee women and children into the interior. Men

Crisis In Europe

Hungary Mobilises As War Fears Again Grow

BUDAPEST, Oct. 14.
HUNGARY HAS MOBILISED five classes of War Reservists. She is reported to be ready to march on Czecho-Slovakia as a result of the breakdown in negotiations regarding the self-determination of the Hungarian minorities in Czecho-Slovakia.

The Council of Ministers, at a dramatic meeting to-day, ordered military measures to be taken "for the security of the State."

In a broadcast appeal for order to be maintained, the authorities announced that "in this historic moment" they urged the people to unify for greater sacrifices.

The nature of the military preparations were not then disclosed.

A message from Rome says that it is understood Hungary has urged Italy to call an immediate Four-Power Conference in Rome or in some other Italian city to solve the Czech-Hungarian dispute.

Meanwhile the Hungarian representatives have conferred with the Italians. It is said that the Hungarians advised Signor Mussolini that speed was necessary because the frontier situation was growing serious.

It is understood that Il Duce is exchanging the idea of a Four-Power Conference with Berlin and London.—United Press, Paris, Oct. 14.

The press professes discontent, the source of which might be found in the bitter feeling evinced by Italy in seeing Germany acquire by giant strides advantages in Central Europe and the

Mass Horror Of Death From Sky

COPYRIGHT.

FROM THE SIDES of the towering mountains which slope down on either side of the valley dividing Hongkong from Kwangtung, I watched in the moonlight this morning dozens of women and children refugees from the war zone wading across the shallow waters of the Shum Chun River.

Thirty miles inland from the Hongkong frontier, the Japanese forces were commencing their fourth day's drive against Canton, and the railway linking Hongkong with the City of Rams.

Features of the fighting so far have been the remarkable ease with which the Japanese have advanced inland, and the employment on a scale unprecedented in warfare anywhere in the world of the advancing troops.

Hundreds of villages and hamlets have been literally blasted from the face of the earth by one of the most intensive and widespread aerial bombardments civilisation has ever known.

A hundred and eighty planes took part in to-day's raids. They completely levelled Pinglo, Pingshan, Pako, Cheungmuktau and Sheklung. Waichow, their next big objective, has been left in complete ruins as a result of continuous bombing from midnight yesterday until well into to-night.

Following the fall of Tamshui just before dawn yesterday, the Japanese forces operating from Hachung wheeled sharply north-westwards and followed the East Valley River up to the Nimshan-Waichow highway.

EIGHTY VILLAGES CAPTURED in rapid succession, the Japanese seized more than eighty villages and towns along the route, Wongmiao, Lung, Wongchuk, Ngau, Wungwu and Pinglo, already deserted by their terror-stricken inhabitants, falling in quick succession.

Simultaneously another Japanese force which landed in Blas Bay in the vicinity of Nimshan marched along the highway towards Waichow, encountering little resistance until they reached Pingshan, which they stormed at the point of the bayonet after two hours' break fighting.

In a remarkable route marches undertaken under actual fire, the Japanese forces succeeded in penetrating for a distance of 35 miles to within five miles of Waichow, where they joined the other troops, who marched up the East River Valley.

Waichow, the fall of which is believed to be imminent, is a most important city strategically, as it marks the junction of highways radiating to Canton, 65 miles distant, to Hongkong, Cheungmuktau (the important Canton-Kowloon Railway centre) and to Nimshan.

From this town comes most of Hongkong's rich silk, who have entered the British Colony to make a "quick fortune" before returning to their home town to settle at ease.

This afternoon I toured the British frontier to the western areas as far as Au Tau and Lommatou—the latter overlooks Chinese territory—and found no evidence to support rumours that the Japanese had achieved a landing at Namchi, six miles distant, or anywhere else in that vicinity.

DELTA LANDING EXPECTED

Official sources also seem to indicate that the rumours are at present unfounded, although a high military official in Hongkong informed me that a landing in the Pearl River delta was expected.

Not only in the Blas Bay area but throughout Kwangtung Japanese bombers were active to-day. Eighty planes dropped more than 150 bombs on Swatow, where at least 250 people are reported to have been killed in the mass terror.

ULTIMATUM TO CITIES Pamphlets were also dropped by the bombers in both Canton and Swatow, calling upon the populace to force their leaders to capitulate before dawn this morning.

The ultimatum informed the two cities that unless they were

Hungary's Threat

Budapest, Oct. 15.
Reliable reports from the Hungarian Government informed Britain, France, Italy, Germany and Poland that, as a result of suspension of negotiations with Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary regards herself entitled to take whatever measures are necessary to obtain an early solution.

They have asked the Munich powers to come to an early decision and they are relying on the Powers to obtain concessions for Hungary similar to those embodied in the Munich settlement.

Simultaneously the Cabinet's attitude has stiffened and it is authoritatively stated that Government is resolved to take military precautions in view of the strong Czech army concentration on the frontier.—United Press.

CZECH FRONTIER GUARD KILLED

Your "Other Woman"

Sometimes you catch a glimpse of her . . . perhaps the mirror is in a good light, your face specially animated or your hair differently set. . . . She is THE WOMAN YOU MIGHT BE. Don't let that inspiration go. Grab it; study it. Then nurse your face along the lines your vision prompted.

Dreamy eyes are her cue. She should build a setting for them that is serene, languorous. This way: She will clear her brow of the tumbling curls; have a centre parting to emphasise that nice straight nose. She will leave her hair long and softly waved—Remember the dreamy eyes; she is not aiming to be sophisticated. Her mouth is too small for her generously modelled face. Good work with an outline pencil and lipstick will adjust matters. Notice the emphasised lower lip, and how it suits her eyes. She won't use rouge. Just a warm shade of powder, evenly applied to her whole face. The eyes now. Their natural heavy-lidded charm will be emphasised with shadow and mascara. She will encourage them at night with vaseline or castor oil, and curl them regularly as she brushes her teeth. She will separate each lash at make-up time a little comb. Her brows, straggly and irregular, will become frankly antennae. She is the type who can wear them. "Soft" clothes for her . . . velvets, drapery, pearls.

Good Ways With Coconut

COCONUT can be used in many ways and it will always be found a prime favourite with the children, especially.

Here are two good recipes for a coconut cake. Take half a cupful of butter two of flour, one each of sugar and milk, two of desiccated coconut, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, quarter teaspoonful of salt, and two well beaten eggs. Mix the flour, salt, baking powder, and cream the butter and sugar. Add the coconut and mix all together with the eggs and milk. Bake in a moderate oven.

For the second, cream $\frac{1}{2}$ lb of butter, add 6 oz of castor sugar, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb of desiccated coconut, and three well-beaten eggs. Sieve 1 lb of flour and a teaspoonful of baking powder, gradually adding enough milk as when mixed in with the other ingredients, to allow the mixture to drop from the spoon. It should not be too moist. When thoroughly mixed turn into a lined cake tin and bake in a moderate oven $1\frac{1}{2}$ hour.

Macaroons

Coconut macaroons are always popular. For them you will require $\frac{1}{2}$ lb of coconut, $\frac{1}{4}$ lb of castor sugar, the whites of two eggs, and a tablespoonful of melted butter. Mix the ingredients thoroughly, and shape into little cones with the fingers. Then bake in a very slow oven. To turn pink, if that colour is liked, use a few drops of cochineal.

Coconut shortcakes make nice sweets for tea. Cream $\frac{1}{2}$ lb of butter, sift in $\frac{1}{2}$ lb of flour mixed with a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of baking powder, add $\frac{1}{4}$ lb of sugar, and then the same quantity of coconut by degrees. Mix well, add two yolks of eggs, and knead. Add a little milk only if not quite moist enough. Lay the paste on evenly with a floured rolling pin. The thickness should be half an inch; just pinch the edges, dust with sugar, mark into diamonds, and bake in a moderate oven for 20 minutes.

Card for Filling Tarts

Coconut card is excellent for filling little tarts. Melt $\frac{1}{2}$ lb of butter, and stir in a small cupful of desiccated coconut, a well-beaten egg, sugar to taste, and a little lemon juice. Stir over the fire until thick.

The ingredients for coconut drops are $\frac{1}{2}$ lb of desiccated coconut, 6 oz

She always had style—graceful neck, slim figure, plus a flair for clothes. But will only be called a "nice little thing" so long as she wears that hockey bob.

Her type should be soignée, debonnaire. She could wear the most extreme fashions. She is a "formal" type. That new swept-up coiffure would balance her firm chin, reveal her pretty ears, spotlight her neck and good carriage. She'll have her brows arched (so far as they'll go) and continue the downward line with pencil.

Her eyes are not large; but she will keep them bright with eye-baths. A smudge of shadows at the corners makes them wider.

Her mouth needs emphasising—especially the upper lip, her make-up in general will be smart—not merely flattering. She will try out exotic eyeshadows in the evening.

And not for a day will she let up on the business of grooming—since, therein, lies the essence of her charm.

She was a glorious baby; she was pretty in a gym costume; after that she lost caste rather. Her mother made her "softer" her rather heavy face with curls. "It's all right for beauties to experiment, dear. Better fluff it out round your cheeks; and a bow would be nice."

But one day she will see an open-air film, and decide that mother is wrong. Bronzed young girls, square-faced and charming. . . . Without softening. And then:—

She'll thin out her hair; brush it up and away; leave her "blunt" jaw naked and unshamed. The height of the brushed up hair takes from her face's breadth. The sleek uncompromising cut gives decision where the curls left a blur. A good start.

In addition, she'll massage away at her chin and lower cheeks till they fine down visibly. Her mouth will be wide-curved—no Cupid's, but an archer's bow. Eyebrows to match go up and outward. She'll wear a sunny make-up; slightly bleach her hair perhaps—certainly give it regular camomile washes.

She'll look her best in sports clothes—slacks, headhankies, and "dirrds" in the evening.

Helpful Hints

MOTHS will not attack woollen garments if they are stored in a bag of unbleached calico previously wrung out in turpentine and dried out of doors.

To banish moths from a carpet, mix together three tablespoonfuls of turpentine, three quarts of water, and one tablespoonful ammonia. Then carefully rub the carpet with a sponge dipped in this solution.

When packing away a bathing cap, rinse thoroughly in fresh water, and when dry, sprinkle with talcum powder. Rub it well in, for this treatment will preserve it in excellent condition.

An excellent ironing board for blouse sleeves can be made from a disused cricket bat, by covering it with an old blanket and piece of sheeting.

If a piece of folded white blotting paper is placed at the bottom of a salt cellar it will prevent the contents becoming damp and clogging the outlet.

Butter when soft may be cut into clean neat squares by first covering a sharp knife with the paper in which the butter has been wrapped.

Autumn

Accessories

NEW hats to go with tweeds have high crowns and important-looking brims. Some of these brims dip dramatically over one eye, others shoot up on one side of the face and down on the other.

Crowns tend to be of the flower-pot variety, swathed in two colours of vivid jersey, or finished with a neat band of petersham ribbon in a contrasting or matching shade. Another idea with tweeds is a velvetene beret decorated with high rabbit's ears of grosgrain ribbon. A vivid jewelled clip is attached to the base of the ribbon coil.

Autumn leaves are the current theme for the all-important accessories that adorn simple new clothes.

Different shades of gold are utilised for these lovely engraved jewel clips—revealing a little-known fact, that jewellers use red, white, yellow, and even green gold. The new leaf jewels, faithful replicas of beech, oak, and silver birch, seem to have fluttered down from their respective trees to adorn the new square and swathed necklines of fashionable frocks. They are also used for clipping on to a handbag, a sash, or a velvet neck-band.

Small replicas of these golden leaves make charming earrings and tiny hair ornaments to be sprinkled over the head.

New Alkaline Way to Relieve

Sour Acid Stomach

Alka-Seltzer Tablets Relieve Millions From the Discomfort of Stomach Troubles

Now you can say "Good Bye" to Acid Stomach and all its attendant aches and pains. Here's a new way to get rid of those common ailments that drag down your health. Now science has developed a remarkable Effervescent Alkaline tablet that gives amazing relief. It is called ALKA-SELTZER because it makes a sparkling, alkaline drink that first relieves the pain and then removes the cause of the trouble. It is the newest scientific way to get well and keep well. No other product has ever been developed that brings such prompt, complete relief to stomach sufferers.

Most of our everyday aches and pains are the result of excess acid in the system caused by overeating, drinking, smoking too much, loss of sleep, late hours, over-work, or over-indulgence. To keep healthy, the body must be slightly more alkaline than acid. Rich food, over-eating, late hours, over-work or over-indulgence, all cause EXCESS ACIDITY. Then your resistance goes down—suffering is lowered, and you become an easy victim of stomach disorders, colds, headaches, and other common aches and pains. Alka-Seltzer is the newest, scientific way to correct this excess acid condition. It is the safe, harmless way to relieve the pain and remove the cause of these common ailments. An Alka-Seltzer tablet or two in a glass of water makes a sparkling, anti-acid drink—a bubbling glassful of alkaline salts your body needs to reduce excess acid. There's nothing like it for sweetening the stomach and correcting digestive troubles. And the way it relieves the pain of Colds, Headaches, Neuralgia, and other everyday ills will amaze you.

Try Alka-Seltzer. You'll be delighted with its refreshing, pleasant taste, and you'll be equally delighted with the quick relief it gives you. Your pain and discomfort will disappear almost immediately. Your normal alkaline balance will be restored, and you'll be healthy and happy again.

Alka-Seltzer contains no harmful drugs—it is safe for children as well as adults. It is not a laxative and can be taken any time, any where. Try Alka-Seltzer the next time you want relief.

At all Chemists in two convenient sizes. Try it today.

SCIENCE AT WORK IN PANTRY

Fish Can Keep 2 Years, But Apples Gas Themselves

Tackling problems for the modern housewife, Britain's Food Investigation Board has found that fish can be kept palatable for two years; that apples undergoing gas storage are liable to suffocate; and that meat is best from an animal killed while it is "quietly resting" unaware of its fate.

The experiment with fish was the most interesting. It proved that a highly perishable article can be converted by a new process into a relatively imperishable one.

At present, ice will keep fish fresh on deep-sea trawlers for from 10 to 12 days. Beyond this period, even with the most careful handling, ice is powerless.

A new method has been worked out of freezing fish in brine at a temperature of -4 degrees Fahr., and of storing them at the same temperature, or, better still, at a temperature of -22 degrees Fahr.

APPLES "BREATHE"

Then while fish retain their original freshness for at least six months, and lemon soles have been kept in a highly palatable condition for two years.

In the gas storage of apples, it is stated, carbon dioxide gas is provided by the fruit itself, as it is alive and breathes, and if too much of this gas is present the fruit is suffocated and rapidly dies.

The present practice of resting animals for at least 24 hours before slaughter is essential. Struggling on the slaughterhouse floor must be avoided.

The ideal method of slaughtering, the report states, "would appear to be the electrical stunning of the quietly-resting animal, thus avoiding all excitement and any struggling."

MODERN METHODS

The Board was set the task of finding if stored food is as nourishing as fresh, and what were the best methods of preserving. Its answers are given in the report for 1937 (4s., H.M. Stationery Office).

It states that in the present state of knowledge it is impossible to say categorically whether or not stored foods are as nutritious as fresh foods.

"The available evidence suggests," continues the report, "that modern methods of storing foods cause little depreciation in their nutritive value."

In fact, it may be said that food of good initial quality that has been stored by the best modern methods is likely to be superior in many respects to similar food that, though still technically fresh, is in reality stale."

Snoring Disturbs Prisoners

Boston. State prison officials are seeking a way to provide unbroken slumber for restless inmates who complain that their sleep is disturbed by their colleagues' snoring. After an inspection tour, the warden said the complaints are justified. A plan to segregate snorers from light-sleepers is being considered.

STRIKE SENTENCES IN MAURITIUS

Port Louis. Following the recent arrest of 300 striking dockers, 200 of those who are at liberty here have offered to return to work unconditionally. The men have been striking for higher wages and a shorter working week.

Work at the docks, which is being largely carried on by volunteers from the sugar estates, is proceeding satisfactorily. Ships are being loaded and the congestion of sugar stocks at the docks is being overcome.

Almost complete quiet prevails throughout the island. There have, however, been two unimportant cases of incendiarism in the cane fields.

Nineteen workers from up-country estates, who have been charged with illegal striking, have been sentenced to nine months' hard labour. Three of them will serve an additional 12 months for assaulting the police.

A fisheries research expedition has already proved the existence of large schools of the fish off the southern coasts of Australia. If the cruise is successful, a tuna fishing fleet will be established with headquarters here.

Mr. Lowen stated that he intended to reside permanently in the Union to assist in the work of King George VI, his heirs and successors, and to become naturalised as a Union national and as a British subject as soon as legally possible.

The Society of Advocates opposed the application on the ground that the oath of allegiance was appropriate only to British subjects.

In its early days the tree stood in the gardens of Whitehall Palace. The bench on which the King is said to have sat with Nell Gwynn is still there to-day.

SHIPOWNERS' THREAT

Kingston. It is reported that the principal shipping companies operating vessels to and from Jamaica ports have reached an agreement to omit Jamaica calls for the next three months unless the continued frivolous strikes of dock labourers cease.

These strikes, which occur almost every day, delay shipping and involve the companies in great loss.

Burma

220 RIOT DEATHS

Rangoon. The riot casualties for the whole of Burma, including Rangoon, between July 26 and Sept. 9 are officially given as 220 killed and 920 injured.

These figures comprise 163 killed and 818 injured by the rioters and 53 killed and 108 injured by the armed forces. In Rangoon 60 persons were killed and 448 injured. So far, 1,802 people have been sent for trial in the provinces and 448 in Rangoon.

Captain Ugo V. d'Annunzio, son of the Italian poet, questioned by police at Farmington, L. I., after his runaway plane crashed into a car, critically injuring Mrs. Susie H. Jones. He was held on an assault charge.

Juvenile Courts "Wickedest Farce," Says J.P.

Declaring "the business of juvenile courts is the wickedest farce I know," Councillor Paul Griffiths, presiding magistrate at Wednesbury (Staffs), recently added: "I try to help in these cases, but I don't want to be here."

Before the court were two ten-year-old boys accused of indecently assaulting a girl of 11.

Detective-Sergeant Lockley said that on August 16 the girl, with two others, was crossing waste land known as "The Jungle." Five boys chased the girls, but two got away.

The one who was caught was stripped, her feet and hands were tied, and she was beaten with a stick.

"I am satisfied," the officer said, "that the girl was in the power of these boys for at least an hour and a half."

The girl was still receiving medical treatment, he added.

Superintendent J. H. Hall, applying for a remand, said: "I am bound to point out that this is a very serious case."

"The two boys before the court are the eldest of the five and I think one or both should be sent to a remand home."

"I shall submit evidence later that if the boys had had proper parental control, they would not have got mixed up in such a case."

Remanding the boys, the chairman said the magistrates had decided that both should go to a remand home.

MOTHER COLLAPSES

Hearing the decision, the mother of one boy collapsed and fell on the floor. The boy burst into tears and cried: "Mother, I want my mother."

The Chairman: You should have thought of that when you were doing this beastly trick.

Councillor Griffiths asked if he might make some observations. The Clerk said it would be better not to do so at present, as it was only an application for a remand.

Mr. Griffiths: All I want to say is that I think it would be well if the papers were sent to the Home Secretary and he were asked how he would deal with the case.

"I think this juvenile court business is the wickedest farce I know. No one who has a respectable family could express himself as to the proper way to deal with such a case."

"I have no time for juvenile courts. There is nothing at all to justify the way such cases are treated."

"We are bound down by law, and even in the most abominable cases—it is obvious these boys are only very young—the only thing we can do is to send them away to the ratepayers' expense of £40 a year."

"As a representative of the ratepayers, I am against sending a boy away at such cost until he is 16."

"That is my view of the matter, but we can do nothing more."

GIRL OUT ALL NIGHT AT 14½

The stepfather of a 14½-year-old Morden (Surrey) girl said in Wimbledon Juvenile Court that he and his wife were unable to control her. She had a violent temper, he said, and on a Tuesday night she stayed out all night with a boy.

The girl was sent to a remand home for a week.

SHE THOUGHT SHE WAS A POISONER

Dr. Beatrice Fanny Board, aged fifty-eight, unmarried, of East Pennard, Somerset, a medical missionary with a splendid record, fell a prey, through ill-health, to the delusion that she had poisoned people, and was so wicked that she ought to die.

At an inquest held recently at Wells, Somerset, where she had been in a mental hospital for two years, a nurse described how she clipped a sheet in a window frame, tied a pillow-end round her neck, knotted it to the sheet while standing on a stool, and then jumped off the stool. The verdict was "Death by strangulation self-inflicted."

ed in Government Gazette, from time to time restrict the price and fix a minimum price for the sale of any article. While the restriction remains in force no person shall sell any such article for a sum greater than such maximum price and no action shall lie for the payment of any money in excess of such maximum price. The regulation does not affect the sale of any article sold in pursuance of a contract made before the date of the notification.

"The Government," he added, "is being closely watched by the Government."

MARKET PRICES SOAR

As a result of the disruption of river and rail communication between Hongkong and Canton, from where large proportion of vegetables and meats consumed in the Colony usually came, the market prices in Hongkong and Kowloon have already doubled.

Merchants transporting vegetables from Chungshan District to the Colony via Macao are making great profits, as Chungshan is now the only major source of supply.

NOTICE TO PLUMBERS.

The following is an extract from the Waterworks Ordinance 1938, which will come into force on the 1st of January, 1939:—

Reg. 10. Licensing of Plumbers.
"Every person, except the authorized officers of the water authority, who intends to carry out for a consumer any work in connection with the construction, alteration or repair of inside services or fire services which are to deliver water supplied from the waterworks must first obtain a license from the water authority on Form O."

"Such license will be granted only to persons (or to firms employing persons) who hold certificates from any of the following:—

The Royal Sanitary Institute, The Institute of Plumbers, The City and Guilds of London, or to persons (or firms employing persons) who, in the opinion of the water authority, possess other suitable qualifications.

"Such license shall be for one year or part of one year in the first instance, and shall be renewable annually on the 1st of January at the discretion of the water authority, and subject to the payment in advance of the fees laid down in Appendix 1. The water authority may revoke any license at any time, without compensation to the holder, in the event of the holder acting in any way contrary to the provisions of these regulations."

In the case of a firm one license in the name of the firm will be sufficient.

Will all those firms desirous of obtaining a license please apply in writing to the Water Authority before the 30th of November, 1938, when their applications will be considered by the Water Authority.

Any further information may be obtained at the Office of the Water Authority.

take to man guns will be formed into a territorial army reserve.

"The essence of the scheme is that in the event of war these employees should remain in civil work for which they are paid, but they would be ready to drop their tools and man the guns if an emergency arises. In peace-time the men will receive territorial rates of pay, if and when they go to camp, or when on a course of instruction."

"The country will thus have a further safeguard. Five territorial divisions stretch from Lands End to the Orkneys, but wherever men are employed in vulnerable places there will be weapons with crews to man them against a low-flying attack."—Reuter.

PARITY WITH ANY AIR FORCE

London, Oct. 14. Well-informed circles declare that Britain insists upon parity with the strongest air force that any European power might have created, following Berlin despatches revealing an inspired press campaign against British rearmament.

"The propaganda," coupled with the recent furore over Colonel Lindbergh's alleged remarks, has caused the suspicion that Germany might be planning to suggest an armament agreement under which Germany would maintain an air fleet superior to that of Britain's.

The German press has declared that Germany's only possible standard toward British rearmament was an increase in Germany's own armaments.

It was as though Germany were replying to Sir John Simon's speech when he warned that the Munich agreement was a breathing spell which should be used to prepare for future danger.

It is authoritatively stated that Germany has not yet any concrete proposals for Britain, but well-informed observers believe that Germany might use the Naval Agreement as a lever to argue that Britain needs a stronger navy, while Germany requires a stronger air force.—United Press.

TANGANYIKA NOT FOR GERMANY

Nairobi, Oct. 14. Mr. Pirou's statement on Germany's colonial claims, and his reference to Tanganyika as a "German colony" has been met with a cold response here. There are big hopes here that an impetus to the East African movement against the return of Tanganyika to Germany will be given by his visit to Kisumu on October 20.

Money continues to flow to the Tanganyika League, and one subscription to-day was from a mining company and amounted to £250.—Reuter.

LESSON SERMON

First Church of Christ, Scientist, Hongkong

DOCTRINE OF ATONEMENT

The subject of the Lesson Sermon in all Christian Science Churches, to-morrow, October 15, will be "Doctrine of Atonement."

The Golden Text will be "God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him." (1 Thessalonians 5: 9, 10).

Among others the following citations will be read from the Bible: "In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness. And it shall come to pass that in all the land, saith the Lord, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein. And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried; they shall call on my name, and I will hear them: I will say, it is my people; and they shall say the Lord is my God."

The following citations will also be read from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy. "Every pang of repentance and suffering, every effort for reform, every good thought and deed, will help us to understand Jesus' atonement for sin and aid its efficacy; but if the sinner continues to pray and repent, sin and sorrow, he has little part in the atonement—in the atonement with God—for he lacks the practical repentance, which reforms the heart and enables man to do the will of wisdom. Final deliverance from error, whereby we rejoice in immortality, boundless freedom, and sinless sense, is not reached through paths of flowers nor by plucking one's faith without works to another's vicarious effort. Justice requires reformation of the sinner. Mercy cancels the debt only when justice approves. (pages 19 & 22).

CHINESE COMMUNIQUE

Hankow, Oct. 15.

Japanese forces, after landing at Blas Bay, are at present pushing northwards in two columns, according to an announcement yesterday afternoon from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's headquarters.

One column is heading towards Waichow from Namshan, via Ping-shan, while the other reached Tamsui, and fighting is now going on at Pingshan.

The announcement also states that General Matsui, former Commander-in-Chief of the Japanese forces in the Shanghai area, is now in command of the South China operations.

At the same time it is reliably reported that one of China's most prominent military leaders, who distinguished himself in the East Kwangtung fighting in 1925, has now been appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Chinese forces in South China, with General Yu Han-mou assisting him.

The new Commander-in-Chief, whose identity has not yet been disclosed, has a reputation in Chinese circles of being a "blessed commander" who has never yet suffered defeat in his brilliant military career. His thorough knowledge of the conditions in east Kwangtung is also pointed out, as an important asset in the South China resistance.—Reuter.

GERMAN PRECAUTIONS

Chungking, Oct. 15.

Discussing the position of German interests in Canton, the German Embassy said yesterday in an official statement that the German Consul-General at Canton had taken similar precautions as the other consular authorities.

He has advised German women and children to leave Canton, contrary to reports that this had not been done. It was in accordance with these instructions that a party of Germans left Canton on Thursday.—Reuter.

RELIABLE REPORTS INDICATE

General Pui Chung-hsi is arriving in Canton from Hankow to direct operations against the Japanese.

Reuter confirms that provincial and municipal archives have been removed from Canton to the interior, but officials are at present remaining in Canton.

The threatened air raid with the expiration of the Japanese ultimatum at dawn to-day has not yet materialized.

HIGHWAYS BLOCKED

Tens of thousands of refugees are leaving Canton for the interior and the river and all highways are blocked with civilians travelling in one direction and Chinese troops travelling in the opposite direction.

Reuter reports that Waichow has been completely wrecked by Japanese planes, who have rained a continuous stream of high explosive on the city almost since the landing was made on Wednesday.

From an authoritative source, the "Telegraph" learns that the Japanese Commander-in-Chief of the South China Expeditionary Force whose name is being kept closely guarded secret, is General Tanamura. Chinese reports that General Iwane Matsui, formerly C. in C. of Japanese troops in Shanghai, is directing operations appear incorrect.

HANKOW SENDS TROOPS

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has answered an appeal by General Yu Han-mou, Commander-in-Chief of the Kwangtung Forces, by despatching 40,000 of crack Kwangsi troops and 60,000 Kiangsi troops to Kwangtung.

These additions, it is stated, will bring the total Chinese forces available for operations in the Blas Bay region to 800,000 men.

Generals Li Chai-sun, one-time leading opponent to the Central Government, has been appointed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek as Commander-in-Chief of the Fourth Kwangtung War Zone, which includes most of the area east of the Canton-Kowloon Railway.

General Li, who paid an official visit to Hongkong in 1920, when he was Governor of Kwangtung, is said to be one of the leading strategists of the Chinese Army.

SHANGHAI HEROES HELP

General Chiang Kiang-shi and General T'ing-kai, famed defenders of Shanghai in the 1932 war in Shanghai, will probably meet their enemies again in their native province.

Kwangtung Air Raids Are Savagest In History

evacuated by all military forces by to-day, they would be subjected to such an "intensive aerial bombardment that your entire city will be destroyed."

Unparalleled savagery has been displayed by the Japanese air arm throughout the Blas Bay area, dozens of small villages in which only the aged and infirm remained being completely destroyed by low-flying machines which, unopposed by anti-aircraft fire or Chinese planes, carried out their operations from such altitudes that targets could not be missed.

Tamsui, which the Japanese entered yesterday morning, has almost completely disappeared.

Fallow birds of Waichow have been reduced to wreckage, incendiary bombs adding to the destruction of the once-flourishing city, which was soon ablaze from end to end.

STRAFED FROM AIR

Chinese reinforcements, hurrying from Canton along the main highway to Waichow, were strafed and machine-gunned by dozens of Japanese planes, which nowhere encountered opposition except from isolated anti-aircraft positions.

Nevertheless, the Japanese lost at least three planes, and themselves admit that one was brought down in flames near Waichow.

A Chinese motorised column, which included 37 tanks, was located by the Japanese bombers west of Waichow. Flying only a few hundred feet above the Chinese units, the Japanese were able to mercilessly strafe and bomb it and claim that all but two of the tanks were completely destroyed.

Japanese troops continue to pour ashore at Blas Bay, where further transports are arriving almost every hour. An additional twenty vessels are reported to have arrived to-day, and the troops occupied the Dum Bell Bay side of Blas Bay, thus completing the occupation of the entire 20 miles of coastline in the former pirate lair.

NEAR HONGKONG WATERS

Dumb Bell is on the Hongkong side of Blas Bay, separated from British waters by only a few miles of jutting peninsula.

Foiled landings are being attempted by the Japanese at several points in north Kwangtung, presumably in order to tie up the large number of

APPEAL TO CHIANG

Berlin, Oct. 14.

The Czech Foreign Minister, Dr. Chvalkovsky, who visited Herr Hitler at Berchtesgaden, and had an interview with the Fuehrer, gave him an assurance that Czechoslovakia would observe a loyal attitude towards Germany. Herr Hitler took cognisance of this with satisfaction.

After expressing regret regarding the problem of Hungary's minorities, Herr Hitler declared the hope that a peaceful solution would be found shortly.

The conference lasted about two hours, at which all questions of interest to both Germany and Czechoslovakia were discussed.

CZECH REFUGEES

London, Oct. 14. Mr. R. A. Butler, Foreign Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, received a deputation from the National Council of Labour to-day, and discussed with them the question of German refugees from the Sudeten areas of Czechoslovakia.

Mr. Butler assured the deputation that the British Government was fully alive to the urgent necessity of finding means of assisting the refugees, and were giving active consideration to the problem of their future.—Reuter.

JEWIS, REDS DISBANDED

Prague, Oct. 14. Under governmental pressure the Jewish and Communist organisations have been disbanded. It is understood that the Freemasons are also disbanding the Jewish I.U.D. committee, which has distributed its funds and has ceased to function.

It is understood that the government simultaneously advised the committee that the succouring of Jews was antagonising the Nazis.

At the same time Czech Communist Party has announced its dissolution.

Meanwhile in the interior, the authorities are endeavouring to cope with disorders in the Slovakian and Ruthenian provinces, where, it is asserted, the Hungarians are deliberately creating incidents to make an excuse for the invasion of Czechoslovakia by Hungarian troops.—United Press.

70 HURT IN TRAIN CRASH IN STATION

WAITING-ROOMS AND THE BOOKING OFFICE OF ELDERSLIE STATION, NEAR PAISLEY, WERE USED AS DRESSING STATIONS RECENTLY TO TREAT 70 PEOPLE INJURED WHEN AN EXPRESS TRAIN FROM GLASGOW TO LARGS CRASHED INTO A LIGHT ENGINE STANDING OUTSIDE THE STATION.

The engines were locked together after the impact, the light engine was pushed 50 yards before the express could pull up.

Passengers were thrown off their seats on to the floor. Others, standing in preparation to leave, were knocked off their feet into heaps.

Large lumps of coal from the tender, thrown into the air, crashed through the windows and knocked out some of the people who had escaped serious injury. Amazing scenes took place in the station.

The hiss of escaping steam, screams from women and shouts added to the confusion.

The injured were lifted and helped from the train. Some were carried into the booking office; others into the waiting rooms.

For a time several injured women who had fainted lay on the platform in the sunshine. Policemen commandeered passing cars and the injured were rushed in these to Paisley Hospital and Johnstone Cottage Hospital.

TWELVE DETAINED

Many were able to go home after treatment, but 12 men and women were detained at Paisley.

With the exception of a man from Salford, all the injured came from Glasgow.

Mr. McDonald, of Airdrie, one of the passengers, told the Sunday Dispatch:

"I was sitting reading a newspaper in a carriage when there came a tremendous crash. We had no warning and were thrown from our seats on to the floor. For a few seconds the train rushed on before jolting to a stop.

"Women from bungalows nearby made tea and cocoa for the injured and carried it on trays to the station."

Sultan's Brother Still Determined To Marry

London.
Tungku Mahmud, 20-year-old brother of the Sultan of Trengganu, feels sure that the problem which has arisen through the Sultan's opposition to his marriage to Miss Joyce Blencowe, chiropodist daughter of an Oxford tailor, will soon be amicably solved.

He has refused an offer to act as chauffeur to a City magnate at a salary of £20-a-week on a six months' contract but, he told a Straits Times representative, "if the Sultan remains adamant I shall have to find work in England. My allowance has been stopped and I cannot continue to live on my friends' hospitality indefinitely."

Tungku Mahmud is as determined as ever to marry the girl he loves and feels that if only he could have a heart-to-heart talk with the Sultan he could straighten out any misunderstandings that now exist. He will not, however, return to Trengganu without Miss Blencowe as he fears that insurmountable difficulties would be placed in the way of his returning for her, or sending for her to come out to him.

WIFE AND ROYAL DIGNITY

"I realise," he said, "that my brother expects me to maintain the dignity of the royal family."

"But I am sure Joyce will adequately maintain the standards expected of the wife of a prince. My brother is married and should be able to realise the wonderful value of a loyal wife."

Tungku Mahmud does not worry about money. He is willing to return to Malaya to complete his studies at an agricultural college on a reduced allowance—if he can first marry Miss Blencowe.

"All I ask," he added, "is that my wife be accepted by my people and that we be given a fair chance of happiness together."

CANNOT LIVE WITHOUT HER

Confident that their feelings for each other are sincere and true, and will last all their lives, Tungku Mahmud believes that when they marry they will have a basis of mutual understanding greater than one would expect between an English girl and a Malay, because they think alike.

"But whatever reasons I may give," he continued, "the only one that counts is that I cannot live without her."

"Joyce would not need to feel any overpowering longing for her homeland, because in Trengganu there is quite a large English colony available on which my wife would draw for friendship."

Opposition has only increased Tungku Mahmud's determination to marry Miss Blencowe. "I attain my majority next May, and then I can please myself. Joyce will be 21 in ten days' time and will be free to marry me any time after that," he said.

HOUSING REPORT

It requires optimism of a character above the average to discover in the report of the Housing Commission tangible indications that Hongkong's slum and over-crowding problems are any nearer to elimination. There is a tone of frustration and hopelessness in the report as though the Commission, made aware in the early stages of the investigation that it was tackling a task beyond its powers, decided to place the onus of suggesting a practical solution elsewhere. For this the Commission is not to be condemned. Even a superficial knowledge of the factors attendant upon the housing problem in Hongkong is sufficient to permit appreciation of the Commission's monumental, nay practically hopeless task.

The Commission's recommendations, judged in the light of the conclusions reached on the economic, financial, sociological and hygiene factors, possess a degree of plausibility and practicability which might well be turned to useful account. However, the natural doubt of the public, long-versed in the peculiar propensity of Government departments for pigeon-holding Commission reports, will be whether the authorities will make serious efforts to translate the recommendations into practice.

Clearly the Commission's task of framing the recommendations was not rendered any easier by its first conclusion: that as overcrowding results chiefly from poverty, and that poverty is dependent upon economic conditions over which Government has little or no control, then the real solution of the problem lies in improved economic conditions which result from factors beyond the influence of the Government. Part of this dictum is extremely debatable. It might be demonstrated that Government could improve the economic lot of the poorer class Chinese by legislation which would sweep away several of the reprehensible features connected with the exploitation of workers, sub-contracting, blackmail under the cloak of "fees for protection against competition", the principal tenant scourge, and other influences, so rightly condemned in the early part of the Commission's report.

We agree with the Commission and with Mr. W. H. Owen, that unless, and until, the labouring Chinese classes enjoy a better economic standard, the eradication of overcrowding and slumming in Hongkong can

Chinese Silversmiths

THE art of the silversmith has been known from the earliest ages, and owing to the rarity, beauty, and lustre of the metal employed, has been always highly esteemed. It has, moreover, been deemed as an almost royal art; for the very scarcity of the precious metal has precluded its general use save as objects of personal adornment and in coinage. Therefore, in ancient times bronze was the metal of every-day utilitarian purposes.

Consequently, the earliest examples of the silversmith's skill were chiefly a variety of small articles for adornment, and it was not until the rise of the various religious cults in Europe that it became the vogue for the fashioning of massive and beautiful art objects and ceremonial utensils which at once became essentials in the elaborate ritual of pagan worship as early as the sixth century B.C.

BY
GREGORY

Chinese Experts

In China, on the other hand, although the oldest bronze objects date from the Shang (or Yin) Dynasty (1766-1122 B.C.), it was not until about 200 B.C. that silver came into use, and then only as a means of relieving the simple grace of the various ornamental tripods, wine-pots, and incense burners which had been created by the technical skill of the native worker in metals. From that time onwards, silver as well as gold was applied with such dexterity that the bronze objects of ancient China are the delight of the connoisseur and attest the skill of the craftsmen of old Cathay. With the introduction of Buddhism from India in the 3rd and 4th centuries of our era came a new standard in the Chinese conception of art. The Chinese became more celebrated than ever as experts in metal-working, and by the seventeenth century at the advent of European traders at Canton, they were allegedly acquainted with every process of metallurgy with the possible exception of galvanising.

Their silver-work had already become famous throughout the Far East, and it is a striking commentary upon their superlative degree of skill that it effectively supplements the simplicity of the tools employed in its production. To a European observer, it seems remarkable, indeed, to what a great extent apparently unsurmountable obstacles are overcome in the manufacture of delicate objects of art which call for the most patient application of such difficult processes as damasking, chasing, polishing, and the like. But after all, the Chinese silver-never be fulfilled, except at a prohibitive charge on the public pocket. But it is insufficient meekly to accept this and to make no practical effort to remove the obstacle. This is the root cause of the trouble, and admirable though the recommendations of the Commission may be in other respects, they cannot claim to do anything else but scrape the surface. Let Government engage as many experts as it likes, they will probably come to precisely the same conclusions as those reached by the Commission of laymen. The conclusions are fairly obvious no matter how exhaustive be the investigation. It is the practical solution which remains so difficult. If that solution depends chiefly on an improved economic and educational standard of the poorer Chinese, then the authorities are duty bound to do their utmost to bring about those improvements. We are by no means convinced of the argument that better economic conditions lie beyond the power of Government.

The Workshops

To even the most casual observer a visit to an atelier of a Chinese silversmith is full of interest. It is, as may be expected, not an elaborately appointed and well-lighted work-shop, but on the other hand is more than likely to be a small, dark room in some tenement situated in the heart of the Chinese quarter. The work-shops, it must be understood, are not to be confused with the sales-rooms which are elaborately furnished for the display of the finished products and the reception of the passing tourists and local buyers. They are entirely separate establishments, and one would scarcely conceive that the beautiful examples of the silversmith's art are the products of an environment which seems so totally devoid of aesthetic appreciation that it is difficult to reconcile the fact that from such unexpected quarters, upon the article to be produced, the average Chinese silversmith consists of a room about twenty or thirty feet in length, and twelve or so in width. Here are found the work-benches of a dozen or so workmen, and in the kitchen be-most commonly used process, and the one most frequently seen employed on fine pieces of work is known as repousse, i.e. metal-work beaten into relief by striking a thin sheet of silver from behind with a hammer and punch. This type of work is called tsok by the Chinese, and literally signifies "hammering with a chisel or punch." It is in France and Italy, of course, where this phase of the silversmith's art achieved its most eminent degree of successful application in the early middle ages, but it is nevertheless interesting to note that it was known and employed in China at an almost identical period, and to no special nation may be assigned the credit of discovering the process. The Chinese silversmith employs repousse like his western brother in the craft for the purpose of producing beautiful examples of work in relief. Dragons, phoenixes, emblematic border and diaper patterns are the usual decorative motifs. The work is accomplished by laying a sheet of silver of the desired thickness, face downward on a bed of elastic cement (generally made of molten asphalt), and after applying the desired design (traced on paper with India ink), by pasting it to the metal it is then hammered into rude relief into the yielding asphalt. After being beaten up from the under or reverse side, the metal is then turned, the asphalt is removed from the face and applied to the back, so that the final touches may be given to the work from the outside. The tools used are exceedingly simple, consisting of a sort of small anvil, or l'it-cham, and an assortment of light-weight hammers, punches, files, burners, gravers, and the like. In fact, the crudity of the tools employed in the manufacture really enhances the value of the finished product in the eyes of the critical virtuoso; for in the silversmith's art as exemplified by the Chinese craftsman consummate skill is more essential than superiority of equipment.

Simple Tools

Even in the production of the delicate seung ngan-sin or "niello" work which is generally known as damasking, the tools employed are of exceeding simplicity. A burn or two is all that is needed to prepare the surface of the metal for the reception of the silver-wire. As repousse work the design is first drawn on paper and then pasted upon the surface of the metal to be ornamented. Furrows in the shape of "U" grooves are let into the material by means of a burn, and then the silver in the form of silver wire is inserted and hammered into place. This phase of the silversmith's art is mostly employed in the decoration of bronzes, and the craft was in the height of its glory in Peiping during the Ming Dynasty (1368-1644 A.D.). Its most celebrated master was a clever Buddhist monk by name of Shih Sou (Shek Sau in Cantonese) whose artistic accomplishments were greatly esteemed by Chinese virtuosi. Indeed, so highly regarded was his work, that imitators arose by the score, who instead of endeavouring to win renown for themselves on individual merits were content to attain mediocrity by forging the name of Shih Sou to their productions. It has been the foreign demand, however, which has provided a decided incentive to further the silversmith's craft in China. The beautiful punch-bowls, trays, tea-sets, flower vases, cigarette cases, and the infinite variety of smaller articles are very attractive; and as the work is invariably unique in design, and the workmanship of superior quality to any obtainable abroad, it is in constant demand.

The great centres of the craft are Peiping, Shanghai, Canton and Hongkong, and in fact, since the outbreak of hostilities in the hinterland, the last is assuming first place, not only on account of the unparalleled advantages that the Colony enjoys as a port and tourist centre, but also owing to the fact that stability of government and absence of political turmoil offers the best inducement for the development of the silversmith's ancient craft.

Distance Judging

Is a matter of luck, distance measuring simplicity itself, especially with the rotating wedge range-finder built into the SUPER IKONTA 2 1/4" x 2 1/4" of Zeiss Ikon. Besides the large negative size, the camera possesses other important advantages usually only connected with miniature cameras, for instance the safety device between film transport and shutter release, to prevent double exposures.

Of Course You Know, But Are You Sure?

Take two points for each correct answer, and unless you get a total of 30 you fail.

1.—Many countries have a floral emblem. It's a daffodil for you if you don't know England's is the:

Rhododendron; thistle, water-lily; heather; tulip; rose; carnation.

2.—Your knowledge of music is not to be sneered at if you can correctly name the composer of (a) Blue Danube (b) Home Sweet Home (c) Old Folks at Home (d) Unfinished Symphony (e) Annie Laurie (f) Rule Britannia.

3.—You might have to go to an alienist some day. Their job is to:

Fix alimony rates; control foreign immigration; issue naturalisation papers; study mental diseases; make out passports.

4.—What, so far as your knowledge of the King's English goes, would you say the word egotism was compared with, or contrasted to, the word nitritism? A:

Syntax; participle; synonym; metaphor; simile; antonym.

5.—Those seven ancient wonders of the world—do you remember their names? Well, never mind—just say how many, if any, still exist:

One; two; three; four; five; six; seven; none.

6.—Newspapers recently have been referring to Britain's new "wonder gun"—a fast shooting weapon to take the place of the Lewis gun. It is called the:

Colt; Maxim; Mortar; .75; Nutfield; Bren; Morris Midget.

7.—A lot of big cities of the world have a district called the ghetto, but don't ask me why. All I know is that the people who live in these ghettos mostly are:

Austrians; Bohemians; Italians; Negroes; Fascists; Nazis; Jews.

8.—How do you spell the name of that fruit—you know, the:

Lockart; locut; loquat; lo-cut; loquat; lotuse.

9.—Murgatroyd (as you've noticed at times) is a romance, but you couldn't call him a neoromancer because a neoromancer is a:

Water colorist; intestate widower; tobacco blender; bird fancier; magician; passionate wooer.

10.—Out here it's "Can you lend us a dollar?" but in America it's "Can you spare a dime?" The value of a dime in U.S. currency is:

Half a dollar; quarter of a cent; 25 cents; 10 cents; five dollars.

11.—They'll tell you in an Agricultural Department if you like to ring them that a shote (or shoot) is just a:

Yielding bull; clutch of chickens; unbroken horse; young pig; unweaned calf; small haystack.

12.—When the girl at your favourite milk bar says, "This milk has been pasteurised," you know it has been:

Frozen; skimmed; heated; separated; watered; left standing in a draught.

13.—Amphibians—and there are lots of different kinds—live only:

In water; on land; on land and in the air; on land, up in the air and in water; on land and in water; in the imagination.

14.—H. G. Wells, is a famous author, and just in case you know him well enough to call him by his first Christian name you should know it is:

Henry; Harold; Horace; Medley; Herbert; Harvey; Hank.

15.—The number of acts into which most of Shakespeare's plays are divided is:

Two; three; four; five; six; eight.

16.—You shouldn't have to wrinkle your brow much in remembering that the holder of the Australian singles tennis championship is:

Crawford; von Cramm; Quist; Bromwich; McGrath; Budge.

17.—Sherlock Holmes, who, all things considered, seemed a pretty smart detective, was a fictional character written about by an author whose surname was:

Blake; Wallace; Soyars; Le Quex; Haggard; Doyle; Pemberton.

18.—This is easy—but don't rush it. By Great Britain is meant:

Australasia, Canada, South Africa and the British Isles; England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales; England, Scotland and Wales; Scotland, Ireland and Wales; all the countries shaded red in the atlas.

19.—Bring in the mace or take it out of something, cried Cromwell. However, the mace I mean is the flavouring used by cooks. It comes from:

Peppercorns; cinnamon; all spice; nutmegs; cloves; mace husks.

20.—Just cast your mind back and try to remember that the man who succeeded Anthony Eden as British Foreign Secretary was:

Sir John Simon; Robert Morrison; Earl Baldwin; Sir Samuel Hoare; Lord Runciman; Lord Halifax; S. M. Bruce.

21.—England's Prime Minister, irrespective of what the Opposition sometimes call him, is a:

Lord; Duke; Earl; Baronet; Marquess; plain minister.

22.—And while we're floundering around in politics, you can tell us that Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's relationship to the late monarch Sir Austen Chamberlain was:

Son; grandson; cousin; nephew; brother; half-brother.

23.—The country once known as the Ottoman Empire later became known as:

Iberia; Greece; the Sudan; Siberia; Turkey; Denmark.

24.—Here are some titles paired with their feminine forms—but, oh! the feminine form of one of them is wrong. Can you spot it?

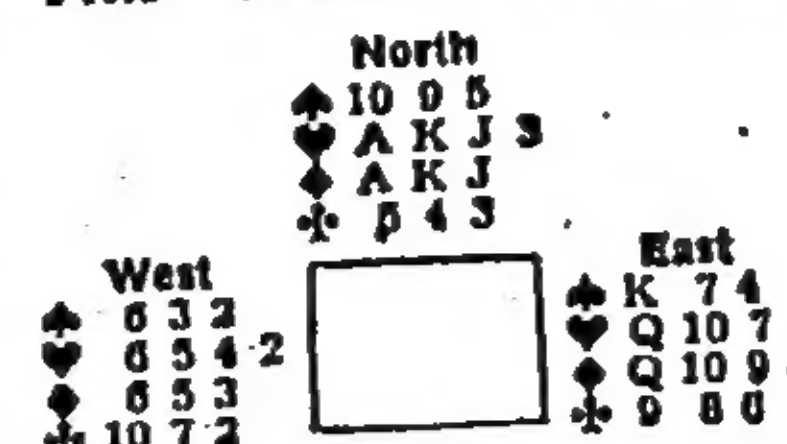

Signor-signora; sultan-sultana; earl-countess; marquis-marquess; czar-czarina.

25.—And now a charity two points to finish up with. Fifteen years from now Murgatroyd, Jun., will be three times as old as he was five years ago. How old is he now?

BRIDGE PROBLEM No. 80

This Week's Problem

West leads the Two of Hearts. North and South are to make the Grand Slam in No Trumps.

Solutions by first post on Wednesday to Bridge Problem, Hongkong Telegraph, Wyndham Street.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 79

This is one of the best problems you have given us for a long time. It was not so easy to find the correct solution against the best defence which consists in East covering the S J on the first trick.

The solution is as follows:

A. If West ducks the first lead of the H J:

No.	South	West	North	East
1.	H J	H 4	H 5	H 2
2.	H 3	H 6	H A	H 9
3.	S 3	S 9	S J	S 5
4.	S 7	C 2	S 8	S 6
5.	D A	D 4	D 3	D K
6.	S K	C 6	C 4	C 5
7.	D 5	D Q	D 7	D 10

Now if West returns a Heart, North South will take the H K, C A and C Q and D J. If East returns a Club South will get in with his C J to make his H K.

If at trick (3) East covers North's S J with his S Q, then:

No.	South	West	North	East
3.	S K	S 9	S J	S Q
4.	S 3	C 2	S 8	S 5
5.	D A	D 4	D 3	D K
6.	S 7	C 6	C 4	C 5
7.	H K	H 7	C 9	H 10
8.	D 5	D Q	D 7	D K

and the rest as above. If at trick (3) East does not exit with his D K, then:

No.	South	West	North	East
1.	H J	H Q	H A	H 2
2.	D A	D 4	D 3	D 10
3.	D 5	D Q	D 7	D K
4.	???	???	???	???
5.	S 3	H 4	S 8	S 5
6.	D J	???	???	???

East is squeezed. If he lets go a small spade, he will be again squeezed on South's third Spade. If he lets go a Club, North's C 9 becomes good, and if he lets go his H 10, South's H 8 is good.

If at trick (2) East has exited by throwing his D K, West in the lead at trick (4) when his best return is the S 9 and then:

No.	South	West	North	East
4.	S K	S 9	S J	S Q
5.	S 3	H 4	S 8	S 5
6.	D J	???	???	???

and the rest same as above. This solution was sent in by A.E.G., and was the only correct one submitted.

A QUIET RUBBER

INSPECTOR PLAYFAIR EPISODE 82

"How can we play bridge," said Rachel Fathmer, "if we haven't any cards?"

"Keep calm," said "Plum" Hateless. "I've bought a couple of packs. Put a cloth on the table, Rachel, while I open them up."

Jake Mantiller looked at his watch. "We've time for about one rubber. Not even that, if Annette"—he glanced affectionately at his wife—"insists on overbidding. Plum and I must be at the tram terminus by nine."

"And what time is it now?" asked Rachel.

"Twenty-five past eight."

Plum Hateless and Jake Mantiller were old confederates in crime. In the old bachelor days they had cracked many a crib together; had done time together too, at Maldstone. Sergeant Dumbell, on the strength of an imperfect acquaintance with classical mythology, referred to them as Demon and Pythagoras. But now the partnership consisted, not of two law-breakers, but of four.

Jake had married—the light-hearted (and light-fingered) Annette, whose speciality was handbags; while Plum, if not legally married, had a big fat in the neighbourhood of Shepherd's Bush, and, in spite of the suspicious and occasional interference of Scotland Yard, found life, on the whole, agreeable.

To-night Plum and Jake had a little job on hand in the neighbourhood of Chertsey. The girls were not in on this. They were proposing to keep one another company in the flat until—soon after midnight, it was hoped—the "breadwinners" returned from their labours.

At five to nine Jake took another look at his watch. "Come and rubber," he said. "Annette and I win five and sixpence each. Come along, Plum; don't forget that new torch of yours." He tweaked his wife's ear. "So long, Baby. Back before one, with luck; if there's any change in our plans we'll phone you."

"Okay, Big Boy," said Annette. The Bridge game had been preceded by a search meal of cold meat and beer, and as the door closed behind the men-folk, Rachel began to clear away plates and glasses. But Annette stopped her. "I wouldn't do that," she said cautiously.

"Whyever not?"

"Alibi," said Annette. "Always a useful plan to have one handy. If by any chance the cops come round—and one can't be sure, darling, can one?—we can say that Plum and Jake have just gone out."

"Not much of an alibi," said Rachel.

"Of course not. But it might be better than nothing."

Rachel yawned. "What'll we do? There's Gary Cooper at the Capitol."

"No, we can't do that. The boys might want us. And what's the use of building up an alibi if we're not here to put it over? We'd better play Bezique."

"We can't," said Rachel. "We haven't any Bezique cards."

"That's no problem, silly," said Annette. "We can make up a Bezique pack from the Bridge cards. Go on; you take the red cards and I'll take the blue ones. Red cards, all the cards below a seven."

"And what then?"

"Shuffle the two packs together," said Annette. "Looks funny," said Rachel, "having cards with two different coloured backs. But I suppose it makes no difference to the play."

"Of course it doesn't. Cut," for deal; high deals first. "We haven't any marker, so I'll score—on this piece of paper."

Both girls liked Bezique and the hours passed pleasantly enough until midnight. Then they broke off for twenty minutes or so while they made themselves a cup of cocoa. About half-past twelve the phone bell rang. Rachel laid down the cards and rushed to pick up the instrument.

"That you, honey?" said Plum Hateless.

"Yes, Plum. Where are you?"

"Never mind that. The cops are on our track. That fool Oulless let us down. Fix up an alibi, quick—the Bridge game or something. And leave the front door open. We ought to be with you in ten minutes."

Feverishly the two girls worked to admit the cops for a police visit. Rachel washed and put away the cocoa cups; opened and half-emptied another beer-bottle. Annette reorganised the two packs of cards and, setting one aside, left the other with its cards scattered face upwards on the table.

Then she carefully burnt the tell-tale Bezique score. "That ought to be okay," was her comment. "The end of a perfect evening. If the cops come snooping around before the boys get home, we can say they've just gone out for a breath of air."

Actually, Jake and Plum—their safe-breaking instruments satisfactorily disposed of—reached the flat five minutes before Joshua Playfair and his sergeant. "Bridget" was the inspector's comment on being admitted to the sitting-room. "How are you, Plum? If I remember rightly, you taught them to play the game at Maldstone."

"What of it?" grinned Plum. "I don't know what you want. Mr. Playfair, but come and watch this deal. If cards interest you, that is."

It's a small slam—about the tenth we've had to-night."

"That's right," said Annette, quick to take up the cue. "I don't ever remember so many slams in an evening. We didn't start the game until after supper."

Playfair strolled over and stood behind Hateless's chair. "Prettily played," was his comment, as Plum collected his twelfth trick. "You're right, Plum, cards always interest me. At the moment, however, an attempted burglary interests me even more. I'm sorry to spoil what is apparently an idyllic evening, but I must ask you and Jake here to come along to the Yard."

"On what?"

"When was this alleged burglary? I've just told you we've been playing Bridge all the evening. It's a nice thing if one can't have a quiet rubber without you chaps butting in."

Playfair laughed. "I'm surprised you should ask that question. As for my evidence—well, only a prima facie case. But I'm fully satisfied that you and your young ladies here, are lying."

Why?

"You'll find it keeps the bowels regular, purifies the system and saves stomach upsets and biliousness."

"If children are to thrive and grow strong and well and digest what they eat. There's no better way than the regular weekly dose of 'California Syrup of Figs.' All children love it."

"If I were you, I would send for a bottle now and give Winnie a dose at once."

"Be sure you insist on 'California Syrup of Figs.' Mrs. Grant, I am surprised that some mothers are ready to experiment with cheap and drastic preparations. DRIVING OUT OF DANGER

In a recent article published in a paper, and entitled "Those about to be tested," directions were given to drivers on how to pass the test. It is pretty obvious that there is more to driving than simply having passed your test. You are then simply a theoretic driver, not a practical one, armed with instructions and knowledge of the Highway Code.

But how many so-called experienced drivers—men and women by many years driving knowledge—are really experienced? How many could act coolly and clearly in a crisis?

To put the matter bluntly we have tests for drivers, pedestrian crossings, half-signs, traffic lights, advice and directions innumerable, yet the death and injury figures show only a slight decrease. Our remedies, therefore, are not good enough.

What is wanted in my opinion is more experience for motorists in meeting and surmounting every dangerous hazard in driving. How many so-called practised drivers can get easily out of a skid? If a child rushes suddenly into the road when you are forty feet away and travelling at 45, how many know exactly what to do and can do it coolly and quickly so that no life is lost?

A Practice Ground

In every large city there should be an area set aside where drivers could go to practise meeting the dangers that may befall any of them on the road.

This is not an original idea. It came from America, where it has been put into use with great success. In Chicago a 30-acre field has been acquired by the National Safety Council in co-operation with the Chicago Park District. This field has been built into a practice ground primarily for motorist beginners. But any motorist has the right to test it. It includes every possible danger that a motorist is likely to run across.

There are three miles of roadway, including a stretch of nearly 900 yards for high speed. There are steep hills, curves, a traffic roundabout, parking places, level-crossing, and traffic lights. In a tunnel the driver experiences night conditions, and fog and rain are simulated to familiarise him with "sticky weather" conditions. He can test his skill in getting out of skids, and get valuable experience in so doing. In the "skid bowl" which is furnished with all possible types of surfaces, there is also a mechanical device which will imitate a child darting and unexpectedly across a street, and which is operated unexpectedly upon the driver himself, teaching him quickness and sureness of response to sudden danger.

This school is open free of charge to all over 14. Beginners are especially welcomed, and they can undergo a course of 16 to 20 one-hour periods of instruction, receiving a certificate on a successful passing-out.

The Split Second

I am positive that for a such system as the one I have described could well be introduced into this country. To decrease our death-roll we must get to the root of the problem. Our motorists must know not only the Highway Code, not only all signs and symbols that clutter up our roads—they must know what to do in time of danger. A difference of one-tenth of a second in response to a danger signal is all that lies between the death of a pedestrian and the saving of a life. With experience of such a danger the motorist has every chance of averting a fatality.

And now to answer two objections. First, the cost. This would be fairly high. But who would grudge it if it were the means of even halving our fatal accident total?

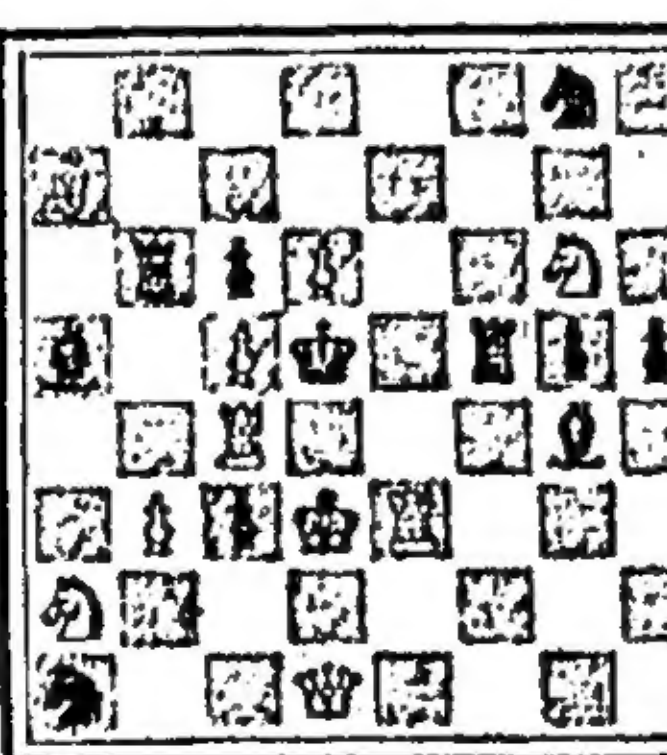

And some readers may say that I am attacking the average motorist, who is, on the whole, a good and careful driver. Would it not be wiser to concentrate on the road-hog who causes all the accidents? To this I would say: there would be plenty of room for the road-hog at the practice field.

And it is a melancholy fact that the road-hog is responsible for no more accidents than the average motorist who just happens to relax his attention at the wrong moment; or who is perhaps a little late in doing what he should do in time of danger.

Mr. W. H. Owen's Housing Memorandum HONGKONG'S SOCIOLOGICAL AND FINANCE PROBLEMS CONSIDERED

Possible Methods Of Financing Big Scheme

TO-DAY the Telegraph publishes a second instalment of the housing memorandum compiled by Mr. W. H. Owen of the F.W.D., which is incorporated in the Housing Commission's Report. In yesterday's section of the memorandum Mr. Owen discussed at full length the economic factors governing slum clearance and the abolition of overcrowding in Hongkong. Today the sociological issues and financial aspects are considered, and Mr. Owen makes suggestions for meeting the problem of financing a big scheme which would remove the local housing problems.

The memorandum follows:

41. The unit of occupation is the family and standards should be based on the requirements of family life. It has been endeavoured to show that the present standard of living is not adapted to family life for the majority. No housing can be considered satisfactory until every family has its own self-contained quarters.

42. To ensure the provision of a separate home for each family, it is necessary to know how many families there are.

One can only estimate or, more correctly, one can make an intelligent guess. In the 1931 Census Report, the population of Hongkong was 304,000.

Of these 304,000 are 131,000 married women and 101,000 married men, leaving 72,000 single persons.

Of these 72,000 are 30,000 married women and 42,000 married men, leaving 32,000 single persons.

Of these 32,000 are 10,000 married women and 22,000 married men, leaving 12,000 single persons.

Of these 12,000 are 4,000 married women and 8,000 married men, leaving 4,000 single persons.

Of these 4,000 are 1,000 married women and 3,000 married men, leaving 1,000 single persons.

Of these 1,000 are 200 married women and 800 married men, leaving 200 single persons.

Of these 200 are 40 married women and 160 married men, leaving 40 single persons.

Of these 40 are 8 married women and 32 married men, leaving 8 single persons.

Of these 8 are 1 married woman and 7 married men, leaving 1 single person.

Ground floor and upper floor plans of the type of Chinese tenement buildings suggested in Mr. Owen's memorandum referred to as Type B.

Flaws Found In Hongkong's Property Valuation Methods

one floor without overcrowding. Poverty frequently compels more than two families to share a floor.

43. The Hongkong Ordinances require a minimum clear height of 10' 0" per floor in order to let light and air into inner cubicles. They also require a minimum floor space of 30 square feet and a minimum air space of 500 cubic feet per person. If light and air were directly accessible to all habitable parts and floor heights were reduced, a floor space of 30 square feet would provide 300 cubic feet. With an improved plan this additional floor space could be provided without increasing the total floor area, as, in the present tenement a large amount of the floor space is taken up by passage ways, necessitated by the long narrow plan. With floor heights reduced considerable savings in building costs could be effected.

44. For ground floors the present minimum height is 11' 0" clear. The height of a domestic building to the eaves must not exceed the width of the lot on which it fronts. For a 50 foot road therefore, a building of four stories will not take full advantage of permissible building height, but a building of five floors will exceed it. The normal practice therefore is to make the ground floor 10 feet high and introduce a cockloft, or mezzanine floor, officially for storage purposes, but actually used as sleeping quarters for assistants. This additional floor height also permits of pulleys and shafting for machinery being installed and the ground floor of dwelling houses being converted into factories. It is generally agreed amongst the authorities that cocklofts are undesirable, and the use of ground floors as factories is objectionable.

45. If floor heights of 8' 0" clear be permitted, then with a ground floor of 10' 0" clear, a five-story building could be erected on a fifty foot road and the height to the top floor would be no greater than the present normal three-story building. With a ground floor eleven feet high a cockloft could not be permitted, but to balance this, there would seem to be no valid objection to permitting the ground floor to cover the whole of the building lot, provided it be used for non-domestic purposes only. With the 10' 0" scavenging lane now required by law, ample light would be obtainable.

46. The Hongkong Ordinances place no restrictions on the number or sex of people occupying one room provided there is sufficient air and floor space. It is possible that, so far as sex relationship is concerned, there is less liability towards promiscuousness when a large number of people occupy one room than there would be with the same number occupying a number of rooms. How far this would apply in Hongkong is not known, but it is generally recognized in other countries that incest is more frequent in overcrowded areas than elsewhere. Open sex relationship may or may not be regarded with indifference by the Chinese lower classes, but it certainly does seem desirable that married couples should have privacy. The partitions in the normal tenement are merely screens which give visual but not actual privacy.

47. For an ordinary family it is highly desirable that parents should have a room to themselves and that there should be separate rooms for adult children of each sex. For a family of six therefore three rooms would normally be required. It is preferable that the living room should not be used for sleeping purposes but, to obtain the lowest possible rent, the double use cannot be avoided. Whilst the living room should be larger than the remainder, it is essential that it should not be so large that it makes full use of it as a sleeping chamber, the mixing of sexes would result. Children under ten years of age normally sleep in a hall, and a room designed to accommodate three adults could therefore be used by the parents and two children under ten years old. In a family of six the remaining two children could have a room each or if both under ten or of the same sex could share a room and leave one vacant for letting off to a lodger. For the sake of economy the combined area of the three rooms should be as near as possible to the minimum area required by law for the whole family.

48. With the exception of the very latest type, the normal standard tenement has only one latrine, and that is on the ground floor and inaccessible to upper floor tenants. Even in the latest type only one latrine per floor is provided to serve ten or twelve adults, and many more in overcrowded houses. The addition of another latrine would only increase building costs and herefore rents, which are already too high. The desirable minimum is one latrine per family but this is only possible if accommodation be suitably adjusted to the needs of the family.

49. Separate bathrooms are desirable but not essential. A small tub of water and a dipping are all that are required for bathing, and the kitchen can be used for the purpose. Alternatively, a shower bath is economical in water consumption and the space of installation is negligible. With the native type W.C. sunk level with the floor the shower could be fixed in the latrine and the W.C. would then serve the double purpose of sanitary appliance and bath wash.

50. For the Chinese a separate kitchen is essential. Electricity, gas or coal used in an enclosed stove are quite beyond their means. Normal cooking is done on a chafin under a hood which, in theory, draws the fumes and smoke into the duct. In actual practice it does no such thing, to judge by the smoke begrimed average kitchen. To cook in the living room is therefore not desirable.

51. Light and air are essential for human health. It is desirable therefore that every habitable room or part of a tenement should be well lit and that every occupant should, if he or she so desires, be able to obtain fresh air by opening a window. In the present type of tenement the windows in the outer compartments are opened or closed. It must be recognized that the Chinese dweller normally keeps his windows closed and no law can force him to open them. Open tenements are therefore in walls can easily be blown up. If it be considered necessary to keep the air in a house fresh, whether the occupant likes it or not, only screens which appear to offer an appearance of success is to provide an outlet for foul air by means of a flue leading to the roof. This scheme would depend for its success upon the very slow changing of air without the influx of cold air being noticeable to the occupant.

52. The successful disposal of refuse from flats is difficult of achievement. The carrying of dust bins up and down public stairs is not satisfactory, particularly when they are so full that the lid cannot be properly closed and a trail of garbage is left on the stairway. Disposal by means of chutes appears to be the best method, and, although early types of chutes were not very satisfactory, faults have now been remedied and an efficient chute is obtainable. No particulars as to cost are at present available.

54. The provision of communal services has been the subject of experiment to a far greater extent in continental European countries than in England. In many European schemes these communal features include recreation and reading rooms, a guest room, sewing rooms, billiard rooms, gymnasia and restaurants. Storage space for prams and bicycles is almost invariably provided. These however are somewhat in the nature of luxuries.

55. The frequent absence of baths and the general absence of individual hot water systems in European housing schemes is largely counterbalanced by the provision of public bath houses, laundries and drying rooms, convenient for tenants in a most appropriate manner. There are eight communal baths in Hongkong and these are largely patronized. The women frequently use their laundries to wash their clothes. The local bath houses are somewhat primitive but appear to be effective. Until a 100% efficient method of rationing water is devised, communal bath houses make up the deficiency. The provision of laundries would be an asset but does not seem to be essential. Climate conditions and the general absence of balconies and verandahs make the washing and drying of clothing much more difficult in Europe than in Hongkong.

56. With communal kitchens cooked foods can be provided in greater variety and at less cost than similar meals provided by the housewife in the house. In the communal kitchen eating rooms might also be provided. The provision of good food at cost price, achieved in many cases, would raise the value of income, a very adequate support to a family whereas, in other circumstances, it would be insufficient.

57. The normal tenement possesses no means of providing heat in cold weather. Cases have been known where tenants have been asphyxiated through chafins being used in rooms where windows have been closed and no alternative means of ventilation provided. Heating, while a desirable feature, appears to be impracticable in view of the poverty of the normal tenant.

58. Throughout the world the tenement problem is constituted of the greatest obstacles in the way of providing housing for the poorest classes. Housing standards have, however, become more exacting, and the normal tenant must live in houses below accepted minimum standards or, alternatively, must be financially assisted to enable them to pay an economic rent. The normal method of giving this assistance is for the State to subsidize building so that the rents demanded are below an economic level, based on the cost of the building.

59. In Paragraphs 10-23 normal income levels and rent paying capacity of the masses in Hongkong were considered, and the conclusion was drawn that, for a great many, the average rent must not exceed $5 per month per family, and for many must be even less. Some cannot afford any rent at all. Under certain circumstances rents as low as $4 or $5 per month can be achieved, but as far as can be seen, at present, it does not seem possible to reduce rents to a lower level without some form of subsidy. In Hongkong the granting of a subsidy would raise the question whether such assistance should be limited to permanent residents or, if not, to what extent would it be justifiable to subsidize housing for new immigrants? For housing under central control tenancy could be limited to people who have lived for a given period in the Colony, who normally work here, and who, if circumstances permit, intend to stay here. For the remainder, to house whom financial assistance would be required, there seems to be no solution to the problem unless Government or charity can provide the necessary funds.

60. Plan No. 3 Type B shows a suggested type of tenement designed to remedy, as far as possible, the faults found in present standard types. The cost of the building is lower than that of Type A; the height is the same, but an extra floor is included. In consequence under similar circumstances rents for an upper floor in Type B can be reduced to nearly half of those for Type A. It cannot be claimed that, under all circumstances, rents can be reduced to suit all pockets, but, under favourable conditions, a three roomed flat, with kitchen and W.C., just sufficient for one normal family, can be let at as low as $5 per month on an average, and if, amongst a number of such houses, a higher rent can be obtained for those more favourably situated, then the rents for the remainder might be reduced accordingly.

61. In Appendix IV are given a number of tables showing development costs, and valuations for different types of houses under different circumstances. Whilst it has not been possible to deal with the innumerable variations in conditions a sufficient number have been considered to show that, conditions being equal, rents for Type B houses are appreciably lower than for Type A and that, if built by Government or some non-profit making Trust, rents can be reduced to about half those which would normally be required, under existing circumstances, with housing supplied by private enterprise.

62. The rent which would have to be charged for a given type of house will depend on a number of varying factors. They are:

(a) Cost of development (i.e. cost of land, site formation, roads, sewers and buildings).

(b) Rate of interest required.

(c) Type of ownership.

(d) Depreciation of property and neighbouring development.

63. In England the costs of roads and sewers are charged as a separate item to property owners, but in Hongkong they are included in the sale price of the land. The average for land, roads and sewers for London housing estates up to 1934 was £38 per house at average density of less than 12 houses per acre. Proportionately at 16 houses per acre the cost would be £30, which, at current rate of exchange, would be $450 in Hongkong. In Hongkong, in Shamshuipo and similar districts, the upset price of £1,450 per house; this includes the provision of roads and sewers. Land charges are therefore about three times higher than those on the outskirts of London, where the price of land is notoriously high.

64. Some time ago it was proposed to develop Kowloon Tsim Sha Tsui as a European residential suburb and, after allowing for all development costs, it was estimated that, with the exception of a very small area reserved for shops, building land could be sold at a handsome profit at 40 cents per square foot. It was proposed to charge $1.00 per square foot for land in the shopping area. In its original state Kowloon Tsim was rough and hilly and development costs were high.

65. It seems therefore that it should be quite feasible to sell land on the - (Continued on Page 5.)

66. The successful disposal of refuse from flats is difficult of achievement. 58. The provision of communal services has been the subject of experiment to a far greater extent in continental European countries than in England. In many European schemes these communal features include recreation and reading rooms, a guest room, sewing rooms, billiard rooms, gymnasia and restaurants. Storage space for prams and bicycles is almost invariably provided. These however are somewhat in the nature of luxuries.

59. The frequent absence of baths and the general absence of individual hot water systems in European housing schemes is largely counterbalanced by the provision of public bath houses, laundries and drying rooms, convenient for tenants in a most appropriate manner. There are eight communal baths in Hongkong and these are largely patronized. The women frequently use their laundries to wash their clothes. The local bath houses are somewhat primitive but appear to be effective. Until a 100% efficient method of rationing water is devised, communal bath houses make up the deficiency. The provision of laundries would be an asset but does not seem to be essential. Climate conditions and the general absence of balconies and verandahs make the washing and drying of clothing much more difficult in Europe than in Hongkong.

60. With communal kitchens cooked foods can be provided in greater variety and at less cost than similar meals provided by the housewife in the house. In the communal kitchen eating rooms might also be provided. The provision of good food at cost price, achieved in many cases, would raise the value of income, a very adequate support to a family whereas, in other circumstances, it would be insufficient.

61. The normal tenement possesses no means of providing heat in cold weather. Cases have been known where tenants have been asphyxiated through chafins being used in rooms where windows have been closed and no alternative means of ventilation provided. Heating, while a desirable feature, appears to be impracticable in view of the poverty of the normal tenant.

62. Throughout the world the tenement problem is constituted of the greatest obstacles in the way of providing housing for the poorest classes. Housing standards have, however, become more exacting, and the normal tenant must live in houses below accepted minimum standards or, alternatively, must be financially assisted to enable them to pay an economic rent. The normal method of giving this assistance is for the State to subsidize building so that the rents demanded are below an economic level, based on the cost of the building.

63. In Paragraphs 10-23 normal income levels and rent paying capacity of the masses in Hongkong were considered, and the conclusion was drawn that, for a great many, the average rent must not exceed $5 per month per family, and for many must be even less. Some cannot afford any rent at all. Under certain circumstances rents as low as $4 or $5 per month can be achieved, but as far as can be seen, at present, it does not seem possible to reduce rents to a lower level without some form of subsidy. In Hongkong the granting of a subsidy would raise the question whether such assistance should be limited to permanent residents or, if not, to what extent would it be justifiable to subsidize housing for new immigrants? For housing under central control tenancy could be limited to people who have lived for a given period in the Colony, who normally work here, and who, if circumstances permit, intend to stay here. For the remainder, to house whom financial assistance would be required, there seems to be no solution to the problem unless Government or charity can provide the necessary funds.

64. Plan No. 3 Type B shows a suggested type of tenement designed to remedy, as far as possible, the faults found in present standard types. The cost of the building is lower than that of Type A; the height is the same, but an extra floor is included. In consequence under similar circumstances rents for an upper floor in Type B can be reduced to nearly half of those for Type A. It cannot be claimed that, under all circumstances, rents can be reduced to suit all pockets, but, under favourable conditions, a three roomed flat, with kitchen and W.C., just sufficient for one normal family, can be let at as low as $5 per month on an average, and if, amongst a number of such houses, a higher rent can be obtained for those more favourably situated, then the rents for the remainder might be reduced accordingly.

65. In Appendix IV are given a number of tables showing development costs, and valuations for different types of houses under different circumstances. Whilst it has not been possible to deal with the innumerable variations in conditions a sufficient number have been considered to show that, conditions being equal, rents for Type B houses are appreciably lower than for Type A and that, if built by Government or some non-profit making Trust, rents can be reduced to about half those which would normally be required, under existing circumstances, with housing supplied by private enterprise.

66. The rent which would have to be charged for a given type of house will depend on a number of varying factors. They are:

(a) Cost of development (i.e. cost of land, site formation, roads, sewers and buildings).

(b) Rate of interest required.

(c) Type of ownership.

(d) Depreciation of property and neighbouring development.

67. In England the costs of roads and sewers are charged as a separate item to property owners, but in Hongkong they are included in the sale price of the land. The average for land, roads and sewers for London housing estates up to 1934 was £38 per house at average density of less than 12 houses per acre. Proportionately at 16 houses per acre the cost would be £30, which, at current rate of exchange, would be $450 in Hongkong. In Hongkong, in Shamshuipo and similar districts, the upset price of £1,450 per house; this includes the provision of roads and sewers. Land charges are therefore about three times higher than those on the outskirts of London, where the price of land is notoriously high.

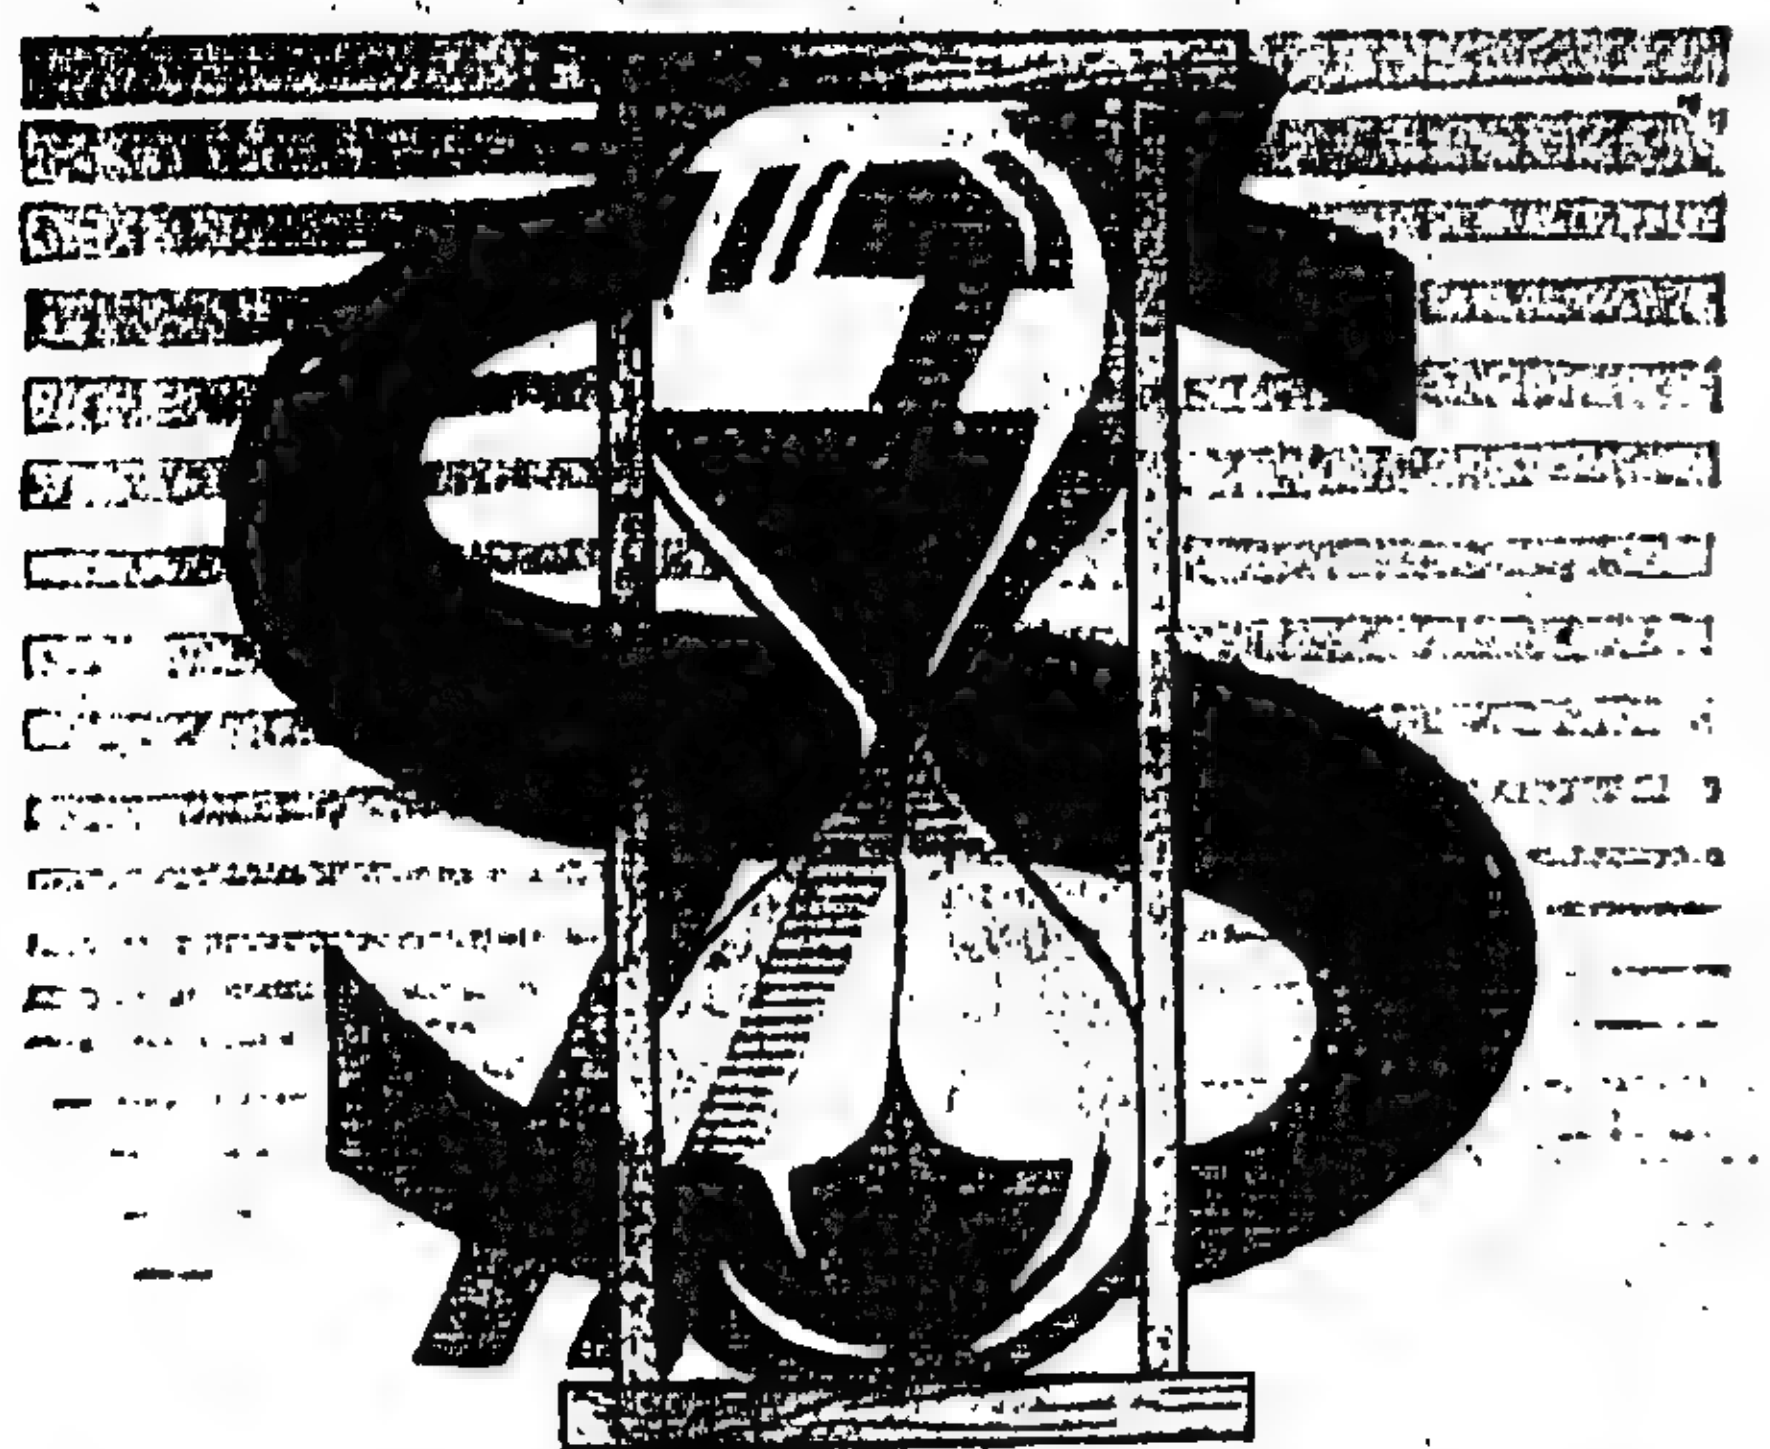

68. Some time ago it was proposed to develop Kowloon Tsim Sha Tsui as a European residential suburb and, after allowing for all development costs, it was estimated that, with the exception of a very small area reserved for shops, building land could be sold at a handsome profit at 40 cents per square foot. It was proposed to charge $1.00 per square foot for land in the shopping area. In its original state Kowloon Tsim was rough and hilly and development costs were high.

69. It seems therefore that it should be quite feasible to sell land on the - (Continued on Page 5.)

Woman's Secrets For Whitehall

LIVED ON RELIEF, FOUGHT FOR £20,000

The secret history of delicate negotiations with the Foreign Office and Cabinet Ministers for the recovery of £20,000 confiscated in Germany was among the documents brought to light at Croydon recently.

During the inquest on a 70-years-old woman, Mrs. Alice Kinzerbach, known as Mrs. Fredericks, who died following a fall in her lodgings at Sundridge-road, Croydon, the coroner, Dr. H. B. Jackson, withheld this history.

He said it was of such importance that he could not read it to the court and that it would be sent to the Foreign Office.

It was stated that Mrs. Kinzerbach married a German shoe and leather merchant and lived in Germany until five years ago.

Extracts from other documents left by her were read. In one she had written: "Now that Hitler has come into power there is nothing left for me but to return to England."

Another was headed: "The history of my international marriage."

One consisted of 49 pages of foolscap paper closely written on both sides.

Dr. Jackson said that efforts had been made to bring over to England a relative of her dead husband, but from what was known it was obvious that no one would come to England on her behalf.

Returning a verdict of Death by Misadventure, Dr. Jackson, said:

"It is possible the woman has been in close communication with the Prime Minister of this country, and with the Foreign Office."

How she had conferences with Whitehall high officials and Cabinet Ministers while she lived on £1 a week public relief in Addiscombe was revealed recently.

MARRIED AT 18
"Although she was an extremely secretive woman," her landlady, Mrs. Margaret Ryan, said, "she often mentioned her struggle to regain her £20,000."

"She said she was the daughter of a wealthy Hull leather merchant, and that she went abroad with her father and mother at the age of 12 and travelled the world."

"At 18 she married the German and lived in Germany until five years ago."

"She would speak of her husband's death, and of her son and daughter and their life together in Germany."

"I understand she found then that her money was no longer hers, and I believe her nationality was disputed."

"LIVED ON RELIEF"

"When she first came to me she had already spent two years in Addiscombe living on public relief, and she devoted all her time trying to persuade the British authorities to help recover her money. She said it was left to her by her father, who died in Germany many years ago."

"Letters with official seals often arrived for her, and she made a number of journeys to London."

"She spent most of her time writing. She said she had put her case before someone who, she believed, would restore to her the money which towards the end of her life became an obsession."

SILVER-HAIRED

Neighbours in Sundridge-road remember a stately, well-dressed silver-haired woman pacing the road waiting for the postman. She re-

Duce Directs Plane Rescue

Rome.
How Mussolini directed the rescue of the pilot and passengers of an airplane forced down in the sea off Castelfosano, near Rome, at the end of August, was revealed recently in the newspaper Voce di Bergamo. Mussolini, who was on the beach, telephoned for a motor-boat, then swam out to the plane to direct the rescue work.

Stonehenge Was Work of Egyptians, Says Archaeologist

Dr. Rendel Harris, archaeologist and orientalist, who has a theory that Stonehenge was put there by the Egyptians, is now satisfied that the site of an Egyptian settlement has been found in Wiltshire, close to Bradford-on-Avon.

Six years ago Dr. Harris startled his archaeological brethren by suggesting that the builder of Stonehenge was King Arthur's Merlin, whose real name was Meri-An ("Beloved of Osiris").

He identified Arthur with Osiris the god and Queen Guinevere with the goddess Isis, and decided that the "Robin Hood," whose name is given to two barrows close to Stonehenge, was really Ra-Bonnu, the sun-god and sun-bird of Egypt.

Now he is satisfied that the Egyptians came up the Avon from Bristol and settled where the manors of Great and Little Chalfield are today near Bradford-on-Avon.

To back his belief he produces a chain of clues stretching from the Holy Land to Harrogate.

"CHAL" OR "TCHER"

Great Chalfield has a church with 15th century chapel formerly dedicated to St. Catherine. Near by are two Gipsy Lanes and a Lady's Copse.

Dr. Harris says that the saint was Catherine of Alexandria.

He buffed them when they talked to her. She went secretly and ashamedly to the relieving officer every week to collect the £1 which was her sole income for over five years.

It is understood that her son and daughter in Germany have refused to come to England to claim her effects or throw light on her claims to the confiscated money.

HARROW'S OTHER NAME

Again, the ancient road known as the Harroway conserves "Heru," the Egyptian name for Horus, the child of Isis.

Dr. Harris, by the way, says Harrow-on-the-Hill is another link with Horus, and that Harrogate is really Heru Khart, or "Horus the Child."

All this is culled from "Isis and Nephthys in Wiltshire and Elsewhere," published by the St. Stephen's Bristol Press, Ltd.

A million children examined...

In a recent examination of one million school children it was found that the average child has two decayed teeth. With advancing age conditions grow worse. Tooth decay, unchecked, may retard normal development and even lead to serious disease.

Tiny food particles hidden beyond the reach of the toothbrush, form Germ Acids which are the major cause of tooth decay. To successfully combat this threat you must fight acid every time you brush your teeth!

You can do this, easily, pleasantly, with Squibb Dental Cream. It is antacid and neutralizes Germ Acids! It contains no ingredient harmful to the tenderest mouth... it is pure, safe... and economical. Start using it today.

TROOPS MOBILISED IN MAURITIUS

Port Louis. The Governor, Sir Bodo Clifford, recently proclaimed a state of emergency throughout Mauritius, after giving the striking dockers an opportunity of returning to work. It is expected that drastic action will be taken against them. Police and military have been mobilised. There has been no violence, but 10 strikers on one of the sugar estates were brought into court. They were remanded for three days. Several more factories in the central area have ceased work because the docks cannot accommodate any more sugar, now that loading of vessels has ceased. It is estimated, however, that half of the factories will be able to carry on for a few more days. The island dependency of Rodrigues, 400 miles from Mauritius, is in serious need of food and it has been arranged that a steamer shall leave for there to-morrow. It is confidently expected that she will be loaded in spite of the strikers.

New Zealand

DAIRY SURPLUS

Auckland. There is considerable speculation about the surplus in the dairy industry account for the year ended July 31.

It was announced recently by Mr. Nash, the Finance Minister that this was estimated at £2,500,000. Opinion in the Waikato district is that it is more likely to be over £1,000,000.

There is much criticism of the delay in making the announcement, and suggestions are current that the "census" which fixes guaranteed prices will make a final decision in the matter.

Exports Down.—New Zealand's exports for the year ended June 30 were valued at £61,919,913, as compared with £64,021,000 for the corresponding period last year. A feature of the returns is that butter has supplanted wool as the Dominion's most valuable export commodity.

Burma

RIOTERS WARNED

Rangoon. An official statement was made that the Governor still retains responsibility for law and order. The Governor is Sir Archibald Cochrane. The Rangoon Gazette says that this announcement was overdue, as his powers had not been used and it might be reasonably concluded that they had been abdicated.

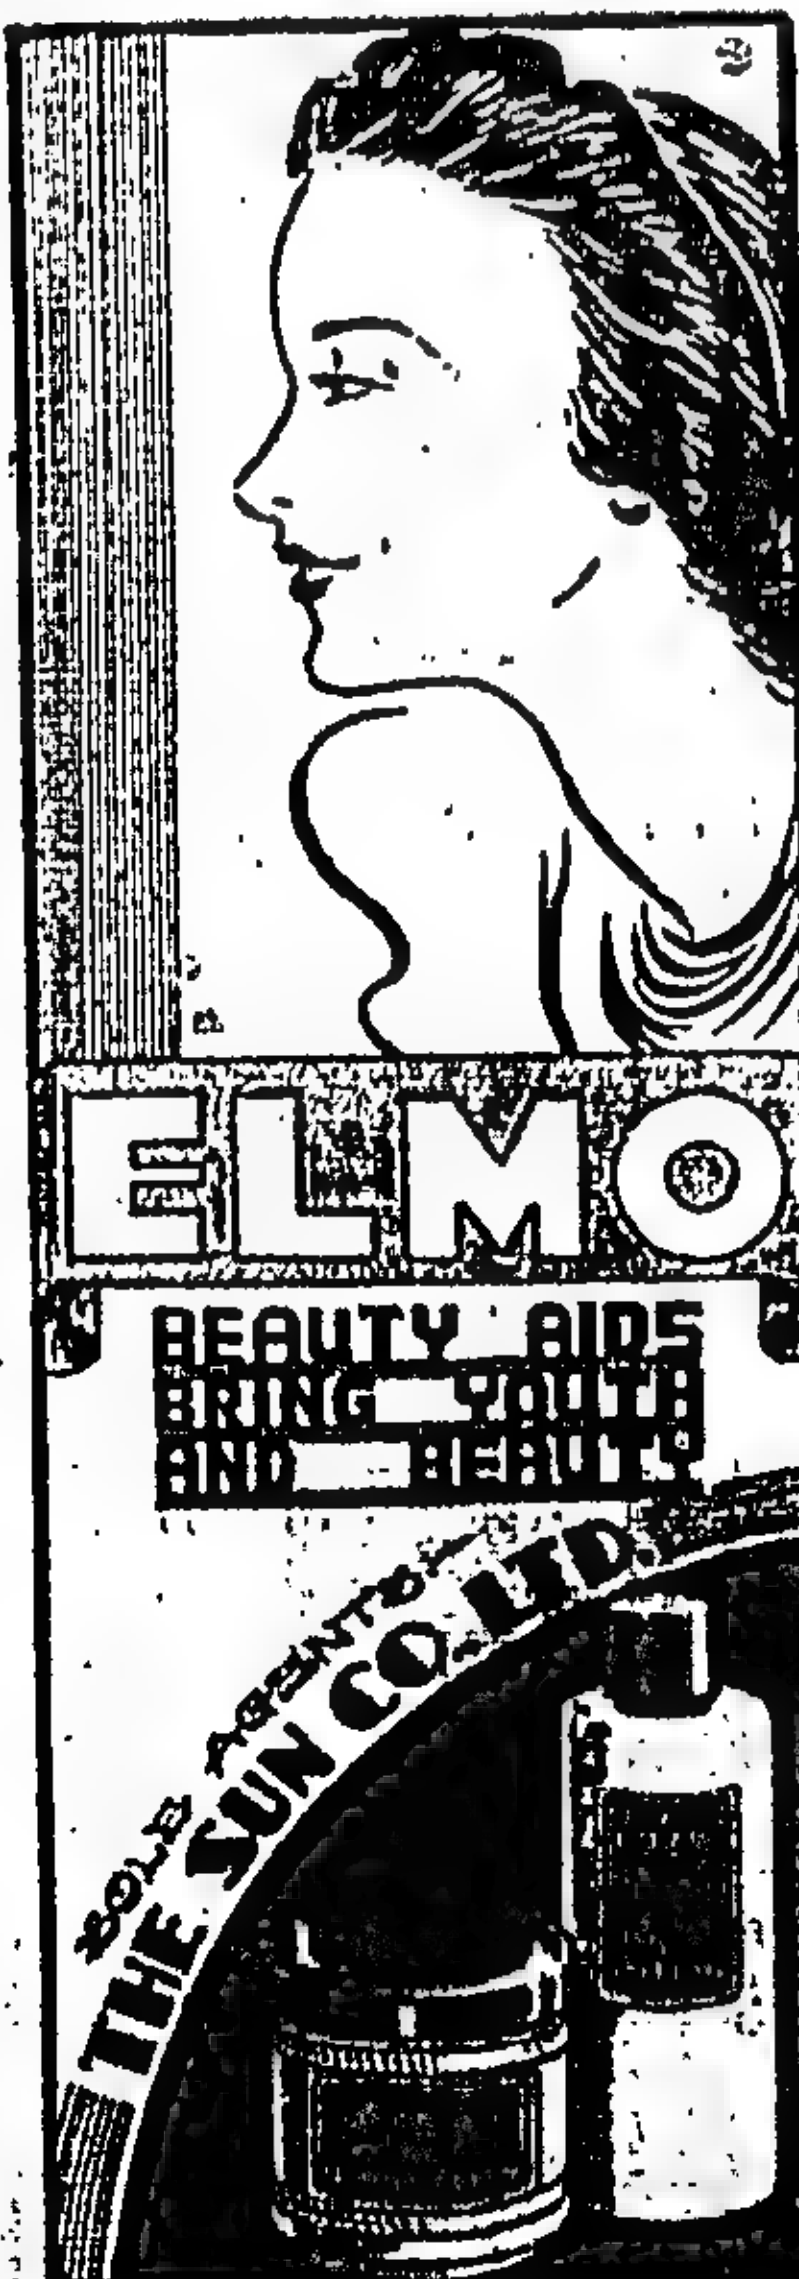

The Rangoon Gazette, which is also British, asks Burmans to dissociate themselves from the statement made in the House of Representatives yesterday by U. Ba Hlaing, that if the Government did not pass the University Amendment Bill, there would be more strikes and riots. This the newspaper says, is a threat of violence.

SHANGHAI BOWLERS START OFFICIAL PROGRAMME

GOING TO CRAIGENGOWER THIS AFTERNOON AND TO K'LOON DOCK TOMORROW

H.E. THE GOVERNOR TO SEE THE INTERPORT

(By "Abe")

The Shanghai Interport lawn bowlers, H. Wallace, J. W. Brierley, W. J. MacDermott, K. L. Swartzell, J. M. C. Lopes and A. M. Gutierrez, were taken down to the Civil Service C.C. green yesterday afternoon for practice. Several Hongkong players joined them.

A rink game was played in which K. L. Swartzell, J. W. Brierley, W. J. MacDermott and J. M. C. Lopes, (skip) were opposed by A. T. Lay, J. E. Henson, J. F. MacGowan and A. Hyde-Lay (skip). On an adjoining rink, the other two members of the Shanghai team, A. M. Gutierrez and H. Wallace, took part in a pairs match, in which R. P. Phillips also participated.

Brierley and Lopes, of course, are no strangers to Colony bowlers. The former, with his wide-drawing woods, and the latter, with all-round ability, are still as good as ever.

To-day, the Shanghai players will be entertained at the Craigengower C.C., who will be their first opponents in the official programme. The Happy Valley club, it is understood, will be represented by L. C. R. Sousa, W. K. Way, J. S. Landolt and R. Bass (skip).

THE INTERPORT

The first Interport will be played tomorrow on the Kowloon Dock green. Mr. Wallace, the Shanghai captain, has not decided on his team; this is only to be expected as he will have to see how his players shape on local greens, which are so different from those in Shanghai.

The Hongkong four are A. E. Coates, A. R. Dallah, J. McKelvie and D. W. Bradbury—a very useful combination and one which is fully capable of giving Hongkong the first leg in the series.

His Excellency the Governor has signified his intention of seeing the game, which will commence at 3 p.m.

HOW SPORT HAS GROWN IN ENGLAND

London, Sept. 30. Some interesting figures are given by a correspondent in the Listener to the growth of sport in this country in the last 38 years. The correspondence arose in view of the "pressing need of some reform in County cricket". The figures given are as follows:—

	1900	1938
Baseball teams	1000	750
Tennis Clubs	10	3,400
Golf Clubs	12	4,900
Flying Clubs & Schools	120	1,500
Dog-racing courses	11	123
Ice-rinks	3	23
Sailing Clubs	123	213
Service Cars	4,300	1,528,000
Motor cycles licensed	2,000	444,000

This correspondent deprecates the rivals to cricket but points out that one has only to remember the stupendous crowds still drawn to football matches to realise that the love of outdoor sports and games remains as strong as ever, despite all counter-attractions, when it is properly catered for.—Our Own Correspondent.

Baron Von Cramm To Turn "Pro"?

According to Geoffrey Simpson, the famous English sports writer, Baron von Cramm, who is expected to be released from prison this week-end, is arranging to turn professional. He announced his decision from prison.

Von Cramm is expected to sail for New York immediately on his release. He will link up with Fred Perry and Ellsworth Vines and go on tour with them and their party. An American promoter has been in Germany settling the details.

DUBONNET IS MADE FAVOURITE

London, Oct. 14.

The following is the latest London betting on the Cesarewitch: 10/1 Dubonnet (o), 100/0 (t), 100/0 Fel (t and o), 100/0 Contrevent (o), 18/1 (t), 20/1 Ranfield (o), 25/1 Punch (o), 33/1 (t), 25/1 Stainless Stephen (t and o).

Dubonnet's favouritism is due to the fact that Gordon Richards, the champion jockey, has decided to ride, and also that the second in yesterday's Jockey Club Cup, Punch, has gone out of the betting due to a rapped hock. The owner's statement now considered her chance hopeless.—Reuter.

The Shanghai lawn bowlers went down to the Civil Service C.C. green for a roll-up yesterday afternoon. Those seen in the picture are (left to right) J. W. Brierley, W. J. MacDermott, R. P. Phillips (with back to camera), J. E. Henson, A. T. Lay (bowling) and H. Wallace, captain and manager of the Shanghai team.—Staff Photographer.

Complete Muddle Over Charging Rule In Homeside Football

LOCAL WEEK-END TIES

(By "Abe")

In connection with the revised rules of soccer, some of which were explained in these columns last week, it is now discovered at Home that some of the new laws are not as easy to administer as most people had thought. For instance, there has been a complete muddle over Law XII and it has become so acute that the game is heading for complete chaos.

In Scotland referees are awarding penalty kicks for charging by backs while "protecting" their goalkeepers. In England most referees, still waiting for official guidance, are ignoring completely this interpretation of the rule and carrying on as they have done in previous seasons.

Referees, players and officials now do not know where they are, and there is a general opinion that the official feeling is in favour of deleting the paragraph at the earliest opportunity and taking steps to frame an entirely new law dealing with obstruction, to operate next season.

Concerning charging, the new law states "It is permissible as long as, in the opinion of the referee, it is fair and the players concerned are attempting to play the ball."

DIFFERENT VIEWS

Therefore, if backs charge the opposing forwards to "protect" the goal-keeper, they are definitely not attempting to play the ball at all, and they are thus guilty of an offence. Under the new ruling, a penalty kick would be awarded to the opposing side.

Scottish referees are following the letter of the law. But in England, most referees feel that this penalty is too harsh and not commensurate with the offence and they, as already stated, are ignoring completely the interpretation of the rule.

In the matches I have seen locally this season, the situation has not arisen for the referee to make a ruling. It would be interesting to know what referees in Hongkong think of this point.

WEEK-END GAMES

Chief attraction in local soccer over the week-end is undoubtedly the Governor's Cup match to be played tomorrow between the Hongkong F.A. and the Hongkong Chinese Amateur Athletic Federation. The game will be played at Causeway Bay, starting at 4 p.m.

Though two or three of the players selected seem to have been fortunate to be honoured, the Association side looks quite well-balanced. I think Blackburne, of the Police, is one of the lucky ones; and Hossack another. Webster, of the Navy, will have to play very well indeed to satisfy most people that he is indeed a better centre-half than Bright, of Middlesex, who has been relegated to the reserve list.

On the other hand, it is gratifying to see that Hartley, of Kowloon and formerly of Middlesex, has been chosen to keep goal for the F.A. team; his consistently good displays have at last been recognised.

The Chinese are almost certain to have one great advantage over the F.A. in that their players understand one another's play so well. But if the Association men play fast, thrustful football without frills, victory for the Chinese will be far from certain.

TEST FOR CHAMPIONS

Some good games are down for decision to-day. The best seems to be the clash between the Navy and South China "B" at Causeway Bay, starting at 4.30 p.m. The Chinese, who won the championship last season, will be thoroughly tested.

St. Joseph's may take courage from the fact that Kowloon defeated Middlesex last week. Of course, Watson, Pearson and Marable were absent then from the military side, but if the Saints play the type of football they revealed in that bewildering burst against South China "A" last Sunday, there may yet be a surprise.

The best advice that can be given to Eastern, who meet Royal Scots at Sookunpoo, is to remember what happened to Kwong Wah last week. Eastern should win this encounter, but they cannot afford to slacken.

It seems a certainty that South China "A" will take the points from the Police at Caroline Hill. The guardians of the peace have shown disappointing form thus far in the League.

The following have been chosen to represent the Association:

Hartley (Kowloon); Watson (Middlesex); and Blackburne (Police); North (Police); Webster (Navy); and E. Strange (Club); Grogan (Middlesex); Leonard (St. Joseph's); Hossack (Royal Scots); Saw (Middlesex); and Bickford (Club).

Reserves: Duncan (Royal Scots); Hussala (St. Joseph's); Bright (Middlesex); Fowler (Club); and Blako (Kowloon).

RUGGER SEASON TO COMMENCE TO-DAY AT HAPPY VALLEY

(By "Fly-Half")

Two very fine games of rugger should be seen on the Club ground at Happy Valley this afternoon when the season commences.

In the first one, the Club "A" XV will play a strong Navy XV, members of which have been drawn chiefly from H.M.S. Tamar. Both teams include first-class players; so a hard game is promised.

For the principal match, the Club has introduced some new players of ability. Luscomb, who is preferred to Henderson for the scrum-half position, played a few games at the end of last season amongst the "A" team forwards. He has a good service from the base of the scrum and is a hard worker. To-morrow he should have every opportunity behind the heavy Club pack.

It will not be surprising if the Club dominates the line-outs as there are five forwards over six feet in height in the pack.

With Salter hooking, the major share of the ball in the set scrums should be the Club's.

A Club victory is assured if Lieut. Chivall—If playing and fit—is tackled immediately he gains possession, for there is no one more dangerous than this amazing runner.

LAST-MINUTE CHANGES

It is announced that several last-minute changes have been made in the Club team. Chadwick cannot turn out, so his place has been given to D. H. Stewart, who played regularly last year for the 1st XV. Earlier this week, it was thought that Stewart would be unfit to play owing to sun-burn.

Of the 2nd XV originally selected, Munro, Tavenor and Powell are unable to play, their places being taken by R. Leigh, D. Hynes and L. E. Lammer respectively. The substitutes are all tried men and their inclusion will not weaken the team. D. Hynes, it is understood, will not be playing soccer for the Club this year, but will devote his time entirely to rugby.

B. Hynes, the younger brother, is out of the game at present, having strained a muscle in his back whilst practising ju-jitsu.

Club teams have been selected as follows: 1st XV—M. W. MacGrath, D. H. Stewart, H. D. Bidwell (Capt.), W. E. Grievie, F. M. Thompson, A. H. R. Butcher, E. C. Luscombe, K. A. Watson, K. W. Salter, E. A. Bompas, G. J. P. Carey, C. M. Stark, J. Redman, A. J. G. Taylor and W. B. Richardson.

"A" XV—G. Low, L. Lammer, D. Hynes, G. S. Wilson, H. van Leeuwen, F. Cossford, J. R. Henderson, P. W. Burton, J. S. Dunnett (Capt.), G. M. Marrs, R. G. L. Oliphant, E. W. Stout, H. W. E. Heath, J. Brown and R. Leigh.

The Navy will be represented by: Paymaster, Lieut. Stevens, P. O. Old, Lieut. Simpson, Sign. Phillips, A. E. Dent, M. Findlay, Lieut. Tabot, Lieut. Cavendish, Lieut. Sign. Penny, Lieut. Seaman Webb, P. O. King, M. Grant, Sign. Inglis, Cpl. Marron and S. B. A. Ostler.

SHANGHAI CHAMPIONS KEEP TITLE

Shanghai, Oct. 10.

By a score of 6-2 and 6-4, Lewis D. Carson and Mrs. M. Reader-Harris experienced little difficulty in retaining the Shanghai Mixed Doubles Championship at the expense of Harry K. F. Li and Miss Florie Quel on the Association court yesterday before a small crowd of spectators.

The Chinese gained the right to play in the final by eliminating J. H. du Pac de Marsoulles and Mrs. R. Fletcher earlier in the day as the two sides continued their fight which was postponed from Saturday when the scores were tied at 8-7 and 6-8.

Li and Miss Quel broke du Pac's service in the opening game and then took a two-kill lead when Li won his delivery. Mrs. Fletcher won her service and then tied the score by breaking Miss Quel's service. Then the Chinese pulled themselves together to win a string of three games to emerge on top of a 6-4 score, making the final result stand 9-7, 6-8, 6-4.

The superiority of Carson and Mrs. Reader-Harris was shown as soon as the final got under way. Breaking Li's service, the champions got off to a big lead of 4-nil before Li was able to win. Carson dropped his service game for 4-2 but the leaders easily took the first set by 6-2.

NONCHALANT FORM

Showing nonchalant form, Carson started slowly in the second set to permit Li to annex the initial game. The Chinese could not follow it up and yielded the next two. In the fourth game on Mrs. Reader-Harris' service, Miss Quel suddenly found her grip and retrieved sturdily. Li was strong at the net, volleying and smashing. Carson drove two shots into the net and he lost after deuce for a 2-nil deadlock.

Picking up, the Chinese started to offer some real opposition when Li succeeded in his second service game. A long game followed in which Carson was seen to be re-asserting himself.

With Mrs. Reader-Harris also in determined form, the two title-winners played in real earnest and managed to win three games in a row before Li intervened to bring the score to 5-4. The tenth and last game was again served by Carson, who literally walked through it to conclude the series.

Cash Down For Murderers

"YOU have been tried by the Rebel Court Martial on a charge of refusing aid to the rebels. You have been found guilty and sentenced to death. Prepare your will, pay your debts and settle your affairs. For you will be executed even if you go to Heaven for shelter."—President of the Rebel Military Court, Northern Division, of Palestine.

Admitted to a doorway, deposited in a motor-car or attached to a stone and hung through a window, slips of paper bearing this laconic "sentence," or another like it, has turned cold the blood of hundreds of Palestine Arabs.

Some have avoided the decree by escaping abroad. Others have averted it by "retracting" and proffering generously the aid they formerly refused. Most who stood their ground have sooner or later been assassinated.

IN the charming (and peaceful little) village of Karnael, nestled among the historic mountains of Lebanon, in the French-mandated territory of the Lebanon Republic, is the main spring of the Arab Terror.

Here, surrounded only by the members of his family and a few of his closest henchmen, lives Haj Amin el-Husseini, ex-Mufti of Jerusalem and ex-President of the Supreme Moslem Council of Palestine, who has organised, inspired and directed the Arab Terror from its first day.

When he fled from Jerusalem last October, evading the night and day guard of scores of detectives armed with a warrant for his arrest, the Lebanese Government gave him refuge on condition that he ceased his political activities.

To the casual observer he is observing that condition. For he lives in apparent isolation in a remote mountain village.

Few visitors invade his privacy—just a handful of intimate relatives and friends, an occasional clerical colleague, and his barber. But they suffice to bridge the chasms that lie between Karnael and Damascus, in Syria, where the dial is located that guides the Terror.

SINCE the Terror first invaded the Holy Land, two-and-a-half years ago, 83 Britons, 250 Jews, and 640 Arabs have been killed. These are official figures.

Among the Arabs, at least, many more hundreds of victims have been claimed. This takes no reck-

"The little red-bearded, blue-eyed man" behind it all oning of the thousands of wounded and the many hundreds of thousands of pounds of direct damage to property.

And most of the lives have been lost in the ten months since Haj Amin found refuge in the kindly land of the Lebanon.

THE Committee for the Defence of the Arabs of Palestine, which meets in the Salihiye quarter of Damascus, is the facade behind which the Terror is organised.

Its members are Syrians and the junta of Palestine Arab leaders who fled when the Palestine Government decided to arrest them.

Groups working under the direction of the main Committee organise the recruitment of mercenaries, and transport of arms to Palestine, dispatch emissaries for fund-raising and propaganda abroad, publish literature and release regular telegrams and bulletins to the Press in the Arabic-speaking countries.

They print the news-sheets that keep each terrorist gang in Palestine informed of the "victories" of the other gangs.

But no step of importance is taken by any of these groups without the consent of the little red-bearded, blue-eyed man in Karnael.

Because of the heavy losses inflicted by the forces of the Crown on the terrorists in Palestine, mercenaries are not as ready to enlist as they were a year or two ago.

But in the remote hill districts of Syria and Iraq, the deserts of Syria, Saudi Arabia and Trans-Jordan, where news travels slowly, roving recruiting agents still find Arabs, Kurds, Circassians, Bedouins, ready to join the gloriously-pictured war against the British and the Jews.

Their pay ranges from £3 to £5 monthly. Previous experience of guerrilla warfare commands higher pay—£10 and even £15.

Special bonuses for each murder committed hold out further prospects: £8 for a casual Jew, and as much as £200 for the head of any one of the three of the ex-Mufti's particular Arab political enemies, Ragheb Bey Nashashibi, Suleiman Effendi Toukan, and Sheikh Husam Sarallah.

A prominent British official or a highly-placed Jew is worth £200. Principal distributing centre for the arms and ammunition is Syria. On lonely parts of the Syrian coast freighters put in with consignaments of heavier arms. Through the wide-open door of the deserts or along tortuous frontier mountain paths smaller consignments are brought in. From Syria they are sent on to Palestine by any of the score of methods known to smugglers throughout the world.

Who are the Arab terrorists of Palestine? About 400 of them, the "permanents," consist of Palestinian enthusiasts fighting from political, nationalist or religious motives, ex-convicts, and escaped criminals.

Behind the permanent force of terrorists are nearly 3,000 part-time followers, who are called up for varying periods and then return to their peace-time occupations. Some take no pay. Others are paid with possession of a rifle.

In the interim of terrorist activities, they serve as suppliers of food to the gangs, but above all as spies.

And while informing about acts of "disloyalty," they frequently take the opportunity of informing against personal enemies with whom they have old scores to settle.

NO less than £10,000 is required monthly to maintain the Terror. The first £80,000 consisted of funds collected by Haj Amin throughout the Moslem world to effect repairs that weren't needed to the great Mosque of Omar.

Further large sums came from the revenues of the Waki (Moslem Endowment Trust Fund) of which Haj Amin, as President of the Moslem Council, was almost sole controller. But that was insufficient. So he obtained about £5,000 a month from Italian sources.

Early this year the Italian purse began to draw in. So now the Nazis have begun to come to his assistance.

From Iraq, and to a lesser extent, Syria, Egypt, India and America, periodic sums are brought in by propagandists. But staidest source of all has been robbery and extortion at the point of the gun. The Holy Land knew this system in the days of Abraham.

FOR their "protection" and the "protection" of their property, wealthy Arab merchants, citrus planters, contractors, omnibus owners, and others, pay the terrorists so much monthly, ranging from a few pounds to scores of pounds.

To expiate their crime of working for the "enemy" Government, officials have also been placed on the paying-roll. Occasionally extortion from villagers oversteps the mark and there is profound, if secret, resentment. Gang leaders, disguised as itinerant teachers, policemen, preachers, then pay lightning good-will tours to the affected districts.

With tales of the prowess of the gangs they first fire the youth. Then the elders, too, become absorbed.

"For two-and-a-half years we have been fighting the British Empire," they say, "and for from being suppressed, we are in the ascendant. Victory will be ours. And then will come the reward for your sacrifices to the national cause."

IT WAS AGONY TO STOOP

Backache Made Him Feel An Old Man at 31

This man of 31 was prematurely aged by kidney trouble, when he should have been enjoying the best years of his life. Here he tells how Kruschen gave him back his health, after months of pain.

"I was in hospital for ten weeks, owing to kidney trouble. When I was discharged I felt like an old man, although I am only 31. If I stooped to do anything it was agony to straighten up again. Several people advised me to try Kruschen Salts. I tried them and found they gave me relief from pain and I felt better in every way. I cycle 28 miles a day to and from work, and shall keep up the daily dose of Kruschen because I can now do the journey to and from work and a night's work, and not feel any the worse for it."—S.V.C.

Unless the kidneys function properly, certain acid wastes, instead of being expelled, are allowed to pollute the blood-stream and produce troublesome symptoms: backache, rheumatism and excessive fatigue. Kruschen Salts is one of the finest diuretics or kidney aperients available for assisting the kidneys to excrete acid impurities.

FAR EAST HONOURS

Frenchmen in Shanghai Decorated by Paris

Paris, Oct. 8. M. Charles Soulie de Morant, well known as an author and novelist upon the Far East, has been promoted to the rank of Officer of the Legion of Honour.

Two other "China hands" were awarded the rank of Chevalier of the Legion of Honour. They are M. Henri Motz, Chief Engineer of the French Concession in Tientsin, and M. Alfred Gouget, retired Assistant Commissioner of the French Police in Shanghai.

There were boys who tried to look like men and elderly men who tried to hold themselves like youngsters. That was in the days before the Oxford young gentlemen of that epic resolve never in any circumstances to fight for King or country—and presumably not for Liberty either.

There was nothing wrong with the heart of Britain in August 1914. One must have seen that gallant recruiting rush to understand in what manner and spirit the manhood of this kingdom responded to Kitchener's rallying call. No symptoms of spiritual or physical decadence betrayed themselves in that crowded hour of glorious life—and death. Not the youth only, but the middle-aged manhood of his country was on fire. From one Scots city about half the police force travelled south in a body to enlist in the Scots Guards.

We shall not witness such scenes as those again. At least so the Westminster wise-acres tell us. We shall have conscription within 24 hours of the next alarm, if there ever is one. It will be more systematic, less wasteful, but not quite so heart-lifting. Those 1914 volunteers were the finest warriors that ever marched head-up into battle.

It is amusing now to recall the mortifying pang with which men past military age—like over 35—watched this splendid recruiting parade. Little they realised then that before the Great Adventure was over they, too, would be in honest khaki, going over the top with the youngsters.

A tragic percentage of those elite 1914 recruits sleep now under serene headstones in the war cemeteries of France and more distant lands. I am certain, could we canvas their kindly shades, to-day we should hear of no regrets. These were not reckless gamblers with Fate. They were freemen of Britain who fought, and endured, and won for freedom. If the heritage they won for us at such cost has since been squandered, that is the fault of theirs. We must thank the giggling little politicians for that.

When the Country Was on Fire

THE twenty-fourth anniversary of the Great War passed practically unnoticed in London. Apart from the usual B.B.C. activities on the wireless, the only outward and visible sign was the simple laurel wreath which the Scots Guards' regimental colour when they changed the Palace sentries. A small laurel crown round the top of a standard to commemorate the biggest earthquake our existing civilisation has ever known.

Next August everybody who took any part in the Great War, including those who merely held a watching brief, will be a quarter of a century older than they were when the bugles sounded the first Fall In. The only exceptions, and they number over a million of our own race, are those who rest where they fell in battle, of whom Laurence Binyon has so finely sung that "they shall grow not old as we that are left grow old."

Can it really be 25 years ago? No doubt whether it seems so or not depends largely on what sort of impression the events of 1914 made on one's mind. Owing to the crowded years that have supervened since then, to those who were not actually in the ranks it may seem more than a quarter of a century ago. But to those who shared the great adventure, the biggest thing by far in any of their lives, it appears far less than that.

The Great War stands out for them, against the background of their lives, like a high mountain range viewed from distant lowlands. For them it is an affair of yesterday.

At midnight on the fatal day that war was declared, for in those times that chaotic formalities were still observed by the nations, I was standing outside the Cafe Monico in Piccadilly Circus. The newsboys came running with the special editions of the evening papers, and their raucous voices shouted the heavy news—"War declared!" There was a slight outbreak of West End hysteria. Piccadilly ladies drove round in open taxis waving Union Jacks and French tricolours. Some of the young bloods threw their hats and chanted "Rule Britannia!" But the demeanour of the crowd as a whole was eminently sober.

By "AN OLD STAGER"

Most people pondered the news in anxious silence, thought-ridden and grave-faced. Everybody realised we were up against something vastly different from the Boer War. We knew then it was to be no picnic.

Pictures from Life

Across St. James's Park, from the direction of the German Embassy in Carlton House Terrace, came a faint echo of voices. It was a small crowd of German reservists, employed as waiters or whatnot in London, giving defiant Hochs for the Kaiser in the very heart of Britain's capital. It is interesting to speculate what a similar demonstration by Britons outside our Berlin Embassy that midnight would have meant.

At supper in a Soho restaurant that night the head waiter, a patriotic Frenchman and ex-cavalry N.C.O., sang "The Marseillaise" as I never heard it sung before. Everybody in the place stood up and joined in, but our little French waitress wept silently. Her sweetheart, to whom she was about to be married, was a soldier of France, serving with the cavalry. A few nights later she was in deep mourning, and her sweetheart had a Uhlan lance through him.

Next day I lunched at a West End restaurant. Our waiter was a young German. I asked him how it was with him. He had not been called up. With ineffable insolence in his voice, he replied that Germany would win the war easily enough without him. He was mistaken in both instances.

Exciting days and nights followed that memorable August 4th, 1914. I watched the Guards march away into the mists of history. First the Scots Guards, stepping stolidly along the familiar Thames Embankment as though going to relieve the usual Bank guard. They looked serious, as men who entertained no illusions. Next came the Irish Guards, somewhat younger on the average than the Scots, and swinging along with that rollicking stride proper to Irishmen going to a fight. The face and figure of one young fair-haired private with laughing eyes is still vivid in my memory. The Guards were marching in ease, and this lad, his rifle perched jauntily in reverse on his shoulder, turned to wave a farewell hand to some girl in the crowd. I wondered then what fate had in store for that laughing cavalier. I could make a fairly safe guess now.

For days an unending column of brand-new khaki passed through Hyde Park. There was one Horse Artillery battery which bivouacked for the mid-day meal by the bandstand under the trees. Its O.C. was a handsome young captain. The day was terrifically sweltering and hot, and the young captain had dark rings round his eyes. Several times he walked over to the water-wagon to drink feverishly. Obviously he had been making a night of it before leaving Blighty, but he was still the smart R.I.A. captain. When he gave the order to move off, some of his reservist drivers mounted before the word of command. He swore gently to himself, passed a hand across his brow, and made them do it again according to Cocker.

Meanwhile, the chic little Park Lane nursemaids were romancing over battalions of stalwart Highlanders, tired out by marching, as they lay recumbent in the roadway. "We had then no provision of the Mons epic or the immortal glory of our Old Swets."

Business people coming up to their daily office routine were startled to see train after train pass them, loaded with sinister-looking gun-limbers, and other scenic properties of the Great Drama about to be played in Europe. A Fleet Street friend and I, on our way to lunch at the West End, recognised a tall figure in morning dress and bowler hat across the ball at Lord Salisbury's St. James's house, and a few hours later read the news that he had been made Minister for War.

120 Warships In Bias Bay

Canton, Oct. 15. Bitter fighting is developing in the Tamshui-Pingshan sector. Both the Japanese at Pingshan and at Tamshui are exerting great efforts to converge at Walchow. Those turning north-eastward from Tamshui are engaged by the Chinese at Paimon, lying between Tamshui and Pingshan.

There are now over 120 Japanese warships, transports and other types of vessels in Bias Bay and over 40 off the Chaoyang-Swallow coast. Many Chinese junks were seized yesterday along the Chaoyang-Swallow coast by the Japanese war vessels.

Throughout yesterday 102 Japanese planes staged mass raids over Kwangtung. The main objectives of their bombing activities were the Canton-Hankow Railway, the Walchow-Tsinghsing highway and the Walchow-Cheungmukto highway. Bombs were dropped at Lokchong, Yucnam, Kuolong, Sunkai, Sheklung, Cheungmukto, Tsinghsing, Tungkun and Walchow. Walchow suffered the heaviest. Over 100 bombs were dropped there, causing several big fires, and high casualties among the civilians.—Central News.

PUSH TO C.K.R. CONFIRMED

Following official Japanese communiqué issued at 10 a.m.: Chinese forces sustained loss of over 2,000 battle of Tamshui, Japanese losses one killed, ten wounded. Chinese are retreating before Japanese troops marching inland. One detachment is pushing along the highway leading to Walchow, and the other toward the C.K.R.

TELEGRAMS TO CANTON

Messrs. Cables and Wireless advise that, owing to heavy traffic, telegrams to Canton are temporarily accepted at senders' risk.

RUMOURS DENIED

Reported landings Canton Delta denied. There is no foundation in rumour, current in Hongkong early this morning, that Bocca Tigris area has been stormed.

Another S'hai Incident

Shanghai, Oct. 15. Another minor Garden Bridge incident occurred yesterday afternoon when a British military lorry, loaded with Seaton Highlanders, proceeding on regular guard duty at certain British plants in Yangtszepoo, was halted by Japanese sentries, who demanded their passes. The truck waited in the middle of the bridge for a considerable time before the Japanese were convinced that it was entitled to cross Soochow Creek.—Reuter.

ARABS SENTENCED TO DEATH

Haifa, Oct. 14. Four Arabs accused of assassinating a Jew at Tiberia eight days ago were sentenced to death in a military court to-day. When captured after a thrilling chase by the Sea of Galilee they were found to be armed with pistols.—Reuter.

SOLDIER'S INJURED
Jerusalem, Oct. 14. Two British soldiers were slightly injured by the explosion of a land mine under a lorry to-day. The mine had been planted on a mountain track near Jenin.—Reuter.
